

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. INTRODUCTION.

FOURTEENTH CENTURY BEVERLEY.

THERE can be few municipal records which give a more succinct and complete view of the laws and legal customs prevalent in an English mediaeval town than the Great Gild Book of Beverley, whence the bulk of the present volume is drawn. It presents a code of the laws of the domestic forum of what in after days would be called the corporation of the town drawn up at the beginning of the fifteenth century, with later additions up to 1582, and similar codes of the minor corporations of the craft gilds, imperia in imperio, which were nominally subject to and constituted by the town corporation, but in fact often controlled it.

To present as complete a picture as possible of the constitutional law of the town, the extracts from the Great Gild Book have been prefaced with some documents of an earlier date, the latter half of the fourteenth century, drawn from a small folio, bound in parchment, in the possession of the Town Council, written on paper, in the early part of the reign of Henry VI., and so called here the Paper Register.

It may be well to premise that the Beverley we are concerned with, the Beverley of the fifteenth, fourteenth, and earlier centuries, was very different from the Beverley of to-day. Beverley to-day is a small market town with a parish church a great deal too big for it; nominally the see of a suffragan bishop, and the county town of the East Riding of Yorkshire, now the least populous or wealthy of the Ridings; but completely overshadowed by, and rapidly becoming simply a residential suburb of the great neighbouring seaport of Hull.

In the days with which we are dealing the East Riding was by far the most populous, the wealthiest, and the busiest of the Ridings. The minster was the East Riding cathedral of that great ecclesiastical and secular potentate the Archbishop of York, with a Provost and a Chapter of canons of its own, invariably drawn from the ranks of the greatest ecclesiastics and state officials of the day, and a large staff of clergy—chancellor, precentor, treasurer, grammar schoolmaster, vicars choral, chantry priests, clerks, and others; while the town itself was one of the greatest seaports and mercantile towns in the kingdom. The returns of the levy of the Poll tax in 1377 show that Beverley stood eleventh in population in the whole of England, being a third larger again than the royal town of Hull, then in its first century, ranking above Newcastle, and far above Leicester or Winchester, which in its turn was still far larger than Southampton. A century or two further back the relative importance of Beverley was much greater.

For though Beverley is still a seaport, and the Beverley Beck, till even last year, sent forth its quota of home-built steam trawlers, and still sends forth its ketches, to swell the tale of those who occupy their business in great waters, yet, as early as 1377, a charter of the first year of Richard II., confirming one of the last year of Edward III., had already marked its decay as a port by exempting it from contributing to a balinger, or fifty-oared barge, which Edward had 'commandeered' from Hull, on the ground that it was 'in a dry place, remote from the sea.'¹ In earlier times the merchants of Beverley would have been the last to pour such contempt on their 'arm of the sea,' up which the Flemings flocked to the protection of S. John of Beverley in such numbers as to leave their name in 'Fleming-gate' (Via Flandrensiū); and by which the seamen and watermen erected their chapel to S. Nicholas, the patron saint of sailors, pirates and schoolboys, at the 'Holme' by the Beckside. The good men of Beverley paid King John, in the year 1200, the heavy ransom of 500 marks to be free of toll throughout England.

I. The Municipality.

In the times with which this book deals, we find the municipal constitution of Beverley in a state of arrested development. It was choked by the Church. The Archbishop of York, whether by grant from Athelstan or some later king to the church of S. John, of which he was the head,² was lord of the town except two small portions which were also under ecclesiastical dominion: one called the Provost's

Fee, under the Provost of the church, said to have been first created by Archbishop Thomas I. in 1092, but probably earlier ;¹ and the other called the Chapter Fee, subject to the Chapter of the canons of the same church, dating from the days of King Athelstan.

Beverley's first Charter.

At first it is probable that the patronage of the church and the protection of S. John of Beverley, which, assisted by sea power, saved the town from the harrying by William the Conqueror,² when the rest of Yorkshire was converted into a desert, rather assisted than hindered its development. The original prose, if such there was, of the famous rhymed charter of King Athelstan—an invention of the age of Edward I.—³ though addressed to the church, and the canons its priests, not the town, yet resulted in making the tenants of the church free of royal exactions, aids and gifts.

The men of Beverley had thriven to thane-right as early as 1180, when the charter of Archbishop Thurstan (more rightly famous than the Athelstan forgery), still preserved in the Muniment Chamber of the town of Beverley, witnesses the lord's recognition of the status to which his serfs or tenants had attained. It has been printed several times: first, from the copy in the Public Records, in Rymer's Foedera,⁴ and thence, with all its imperfections, in Poulson's *Beverlac*⁵ and Stubbs's Select Charters.⁶ It is now printed in an appendix to this volume from the original at Beverley as about to appear in my report to the Historical MSS. Commission on the records of the borough of Beverley.⁷ The charter is undated. But the date is approximately fixed by the facts that Archbishop Thurstan's accession was in 1119, that one of the witnesses, Alan de Perci, died between 1133 and 1135,⁸ while of the other witnesses Thomas, Provost of Beverley, and Walter Espec were present at the latter's foundation of Rievaulx Abbey in 1132,⁹ and that a charter granted by Henry I. (which may be taken to have been before Thurstan's charter, as it is mentioned in it) was witnessed by 'Geoffrey, Chancellor' 1124-85. The Charter witnessed that the Archbishop had given and granted 'to the men (hominibus) of Beverley all liberties by the same laws by which those of York have them in their city' by licence of the King, Henry I. 'who by his charter confirmed our statutes and laws after the form of the laws of the burgesses of York, saving the honour of God and S. John and the canons,' i.e. the canons of Beverley. 'Besides these free customs,' the charter proceeds, 'I also am willing that my burgesses of Beverley shall have their Hanshouse which I give and grant them that they may there debate their by-laws (statuta sua pertractent) to the honour of God and S. John and the canons and amendment of the whole township, by the same law of liberties as those of York have in their Hanshouse, and the toll for ever for 8¹ marks a year.' Three feast days were excepted, on which, as appears from charters of the church of S. John, fairs were held, when the tolls belonged to the canons, just as during S. Giles's Fair at Winchester the tolls belonged to the bishop. During these days the burgesses of Beverley themselves were freed of all toll. The Archbishop also granted the burgesses free passage in and out of the town, except through meadows and cornfields. Finally he bears witness (sciatis: the change of phrase emphasises the fact that he could not grant, as Dr. Stubbs says, for it was not his to grant) that the burgesses are free of toll throughout Yorkshire. It is strange, in face of this charter, to find that as late as 1373 (p. 44) Thomas of Beverley, the archbishop's steward, and two others, presumably his bailiffs, had to enforce by suit at York against the mayor the freedom of the burgesses of Beverley from toll in the city of York. Perhaps the contention was that York was not in Yorkshire any more than London is now in Middlesex; or, that the York charter being earlier was paramount.²

Beverley as a Mercantile Community.

It seems at first sight as if the charter drew a distinction between the 'men' and the 'burgesses' of Beverley, and that the first set had only the free laws, and the other set the Hanshouse, toll, and freedom from toll. But Henry I.'s confirmation charter³ shows that it was a distinction without a difference; or rather perhaps, that the men of Beverley became the burgesses of Beverley by the very fact of the grant. For Henry confirms 'to the men of Beverley free burgage according to the free laws and customs of the burgesses of York, and their merchant gild.' What these laws and customs were we do not know, as there is no known charter for York earlier than 1200, the first year of John, some eighty years later. One thing seems certain, that the same people in the same charter were granted free burgage, whatever that may mean, and a Hanshouse with a right to a merchant gild in it; and that in 1359 the Magna Carta (p. 1) of the community of Beverley was declared 'in our Gild Hall of Beverley, from of old called the Hanshouse' by twelve persons 'elected by the common consent and assent of the community,' not of the merchants, but 'of the town of Beverley to keep the said town and the customs and statutes of the same town for that year.' At Beverley at the date of Thurstan's charter, the burgesses and the merchant gild seem to have been one and the same body, not, as Mr. Gross argues in the Gild Merchant, two separate bodies, which afterwards became merged. They may have been, and indeed seemingly were, the same body under two different aspects. As time went on, they became entirely separate.

A confirmation charter to York of John's time, 1200,¹ would appear to suggest that York itself had only obtained its merchant gild in the reign of Henry I., as it specifically confirms to the citizens 'their merchant gild and their hanses (hansas) in England and Normandy as they had them in the time of his father's grandfather;' while the Pipe Roll of 1130 shows that Thomas of York, son of Ulvet, owed the king a sporting dog to be Alderman of the Merchant Gild of York. The men of Lincoln paid 200 marks of silver and 4 marks of gold (= £24)² to hold their city from the king in 1130.³ The men of Beverley were therefore little, if at all, behind Lincoln, the fourth town in the kingdom, in obtaining recognition by charter. Archbishop William, probably in 1154,⁴ confirmed Thurstan's charter with more elaborate explanations. Pope Lucius III.,⁵ from the ecclesiastical side, confirmed the liberties and free customs of the men of Beverley, while Henry II., from the civil side, confirmed the liberties and customs of the burgesses of Beverley 'in toll and hanshus' &c., as the two archbishops had granted. The charter of John already mentioned granted freedom 'from toll, pontage passage' and the rest, 'to God and S. John and the men of Beverley' 'throughout all our land, saving the liberties of the city of London.' A similar charter to York specified that the freedom extended 'through all England and Normandy and Aquitaine and Anjou and Picardy, and all parts and coasts of the sea' thereof. As the Beverley charter is granted by John as Duke of Normandy and Aquitaine and Earl of Anjou, as well as king, their liberties must have been similarly extensive, subject to the saving of the liberties of London. The remarkable status of Beverley is evidenced in 1212,¹ when the men of Beverley received a safe-conduct to go to Winchester Fair, prolonged for eight days, together with those of London, Lincoln, Leicester, Northampton and Southampton; and again in 1214 they were ordered, as were other great ports, to seize all Flemings.²

Beverley as a Rural Community.

The mercantile enterprise of Beverley is that which strikes us most strongly in these early charters, but Beverley figures quite as largely in other records, and especially in its own, as a rural community. The liberties and free customs, the free exit and entrance to the town, were not sought only for commerce and goods, but also for agriculture and cattle. On a plea roll³ of King John's reign one may read that the men of Beverley complained of their dispossession by the Archbishop (Geoffrey, John's brother) of 'their pasture, toll, turbary, sand pit (sableneria) and their issue from Beverley.' The Archbishop in court promised to make restoration, but instead, continued to bar out the burgesses, and put up a hedge where there had formerly been only a ditch. The men of Beverley again complained. William of Stuteville and the Sheriff of Yorkshire were directed to hold an inquiry, and they put the burgesses in seisin. Then the Archbishop called in the ecclesiastical arm to help the secular, and excommunicated Stuteville and the jury; but the King promptly gave the men of Beverley full seisin according to their charter. These pastures figure largely in our records, and indeed in the later history of Beverley. The amenity of the town as a place of residence and resort is largely due to what is now the great open space called Westwood, on the last slope of the chalk wolds as they fall to the plain of the town of Beverley and the river Hull. The soil of this is now vested by a modern Act of Parliament in the close hereditary body of the freemen of Beverley.

The freehold was granted by Archbishop Alexander Neville in 1380 to twelve burgesses of Beverley by name, who were undoubtedly the twelve keepers or governors, 'and to all the burgesses and their successors and the community of the town.' The grant has often been spoken of as if it were a generous gift to the town, and an act of great munificence on the part of the prelate. But, as with most other grants to their tenants from the lords of lands, and especially the Church, there was more of lucre than charity about it. It was purely a business transaction and represented the end of a long struggle of which the suit in John's reign was an early episode. It was the final purchase at a chief rent of the soil of a common in which the men of Beverley had immemorial rights.

Like other town communities, however mercantile in character, the town of Beverley depended on its oxen and its cows, its pigs and horses and its sheep, and these depended on the pastures open to them. The Ancient Customs, here printed from the Great Gild Book, were taken from an earlier Town Chartulary, of the first half of the fourteenth century, now in the British Museum,¹ which may be called the Parchment Register. They show that there were different pastures for the various beasts. Westwood was for pannage for pigs and for beasts of burden; Fegang, now corruptly called Figham, was, as its name implies, the cow-gate, where 'neither ox nor draught bullock, sheep or swine or geese might go' (p. 16), while the sheep sought their living in the lanes and 'public streets and the entries and exits all round the town of Beverley' (p. 19), though they also, in later days at least, were to be found in Swinemoor. At the date of the Parchment Register swine were still allowed in Swinemoor. Besides these there was a meadow called Tung or Tongue, from its shape—a name misread by Poulson into Dungs; while Groval or Gravel, now Grovehill, furnished the town with a common lime kiln and sand pit, and a tilery and brickfield. All the pastures were, like Figham (p. 16), open only to burgesses 'living in the town, peer and partner in scot and lot and contributing to the business of the community.' It seems from a copy of a deed of the year 1282 in the Parchment Register² that the people of Beverley had anciently common in the then archiepiscopal Park on the south of the town, still called Beverley Parks. But Sewall de Bovill, archbishop 1255-58, had concluded an agreement with William the tailor and others (of whom two only survived in 1282, Richard the carter and Andrew Matfrey), and 'the whole community,' made 'in the Court of the lord King Henry III.' before the justices of the same archbishop, the King's justices, as the practice was, sitting as assessors. Perhaps this 'composition' was a way of levying a fine with the object of enclosing Beverley Parks for hunting purposes, which the rights of common interfered with. The community gave up their rights of common in the park and its enclosure, and a meadow called Staynker (Stone Carr). On his side, the Archbishop granted the community free pannage in Westwood and common of pasture there for their own beasts of burden (averia), with free warren and chase in the wood and in the fields of Beverley with their own dogs. He also gave them common of pasture in Fegang and the meadow called Hutehenges (also called Outings), and the ploughland in it by Newdike, at a rent of 6s. 8d., no villain of the Archbishop's being allowed to common in Fegang. It was also agreed that divisions should be made between the pasture and agricultural land of Westwood, and no more of it should ever be converted into agricultural land, nor should the Archbishop have any rights of agistment in Westwood. This is the first mention I have come across of the 'community' of Beverley. It was already an effective agent for common action.

In the time of Archbishop William Wykwane (1279-85) the quarrel had been resumed, but a new suit resulted in a victory for the Archbishop, and the renewal and confirmation of the agreement made with Archbishop Sewall. Mutual conveyances were executed. That on the side of the town, dated 12 April 1282, being the deed above referred to in the Parchment Register,¹ was unknown to Poulson, who has printed² a translation of that executed on the part of the Archbishop, the original of which is in the town archives. This he describes as 'an act of munificence on the part of William Wichwane.' On the strength of it, at the Queen's Jubilee it was actually proposed to erect a statue to the good man as a sort of second founder of Beverley. Yet the Archbishop's own deed, though it does not recite Sewall's agreement, shows that it was only a confirmation of it. 'And the other things in the composition lately made between Sewall Archbishop of York our predecessor and the commonalty aforesaid we do grant and confirm to continue in force in every the articles thereof.' Read with the town's deed, it is at once apparent that the whole transaction was a bargain for good consideration in settlement of a legal struggle. The Archbishop got his hunting-ground enlarged by the Stone Carr, in a ring fence, clear of all rights of his tenants; the men of Beverley obtained equally undisputed possession of rights in Westwood, with hunting rights there, a confirmation of their rights in the Fegang pasture, and an enlargement of it by the Outings, at a rent, however, of 6s. 8d. a year. Besides this the community obtained, at a fixed rent of 6s. 8d. for ever, 'that great stone house in the market-place of Beverley called Biscop-dynges,' as it is described in the town's deed, which was presumably the Thinghall where the Archbishop held his court. It would not appear that even this grant was a new grant. At all events, the rent was a full rent. Even as late as the reign of Edward VI. the prebendal mansions of the canons were only valued at that amount. In Poulson's time the Dings were called the Butter-dings, having become the butter-market, and he tells us that the property was sold by the corporation to their tenants within the last ten years, i.e. 1819-29.

It was nearly a century after Wykwane's confirmation of Sewall's grant of the use of the surface of Westwood that the community acquired, in 1380, from Archbishop Alexander Neville, the ownership of the soil, full 400 acres. This again was not by any act of charity, but for what was then a rack rent of 100s. a year; for then and long afterwards in those parts 6d. an acre was a full rent for good arable land, and this was a mere pasture, subject to rights of common and hunting. The original contract in French for this grant is preserved in the Beverley archives, and as an interesting specimen of a legal agreement is given in full in the Appendix (p. 135).

How purely a matter of bargain and sale it was may be gathered from the town having to pay the costs of obtaining a licence in mortmain from the Crown and the confirmation of the Chapter of York. It marks the progress of the development of the constitution of Beverley, that whereas the earlier grant of Archbishop Wykwane had been made to 108 burgesses (probably the whole number of burgage tenants) by name, that of Archbishop Neville was made to twelve burgesses only by name, 'our burgesses of Beverley and to all and singular the burgesses and their successors and the community of the same.' The twelve named were no doubt the twelve Keepers.

Municipal Constitution. The Twelve Keepers v. Alderman and Chamberlains.

Our records do not begin early enough to throw any real light on the vexed question of the origin of the town Governors, the twelve Keepers. Were they simply a leet jury, or, as it were, a hundred jury of four men from each of the three fees into which Beverley was divided, or a development of the affecters of the assizes of ale and bread? It seems certain that they were not the definite creation of some single charter or even series of charters. We find the constitution in a state of flux and crux. The first documents in this book the 'Magna Carta of the community' in 1359 (p. 1), and the royal order for the election of the twelve keepers in 1382 (p. 6), show that a struggle was still going on between two contending principles of government, one represented by an alderman and two chamberlains, and the other, which finally prevailed, embodied in twelve keepers (custodes) or governors (gubernatores). The name was retained under the charter of Elizabeth in 1572,¹ which gave Beverley a mayor, but ceased when a charter of James II.² assimilated the title and government to the ordinary type of mayor, aldermen, and capital burgesses. What political or social principle underlay the contest between Alderman and Keepers is not very clear. Poulson, the local historian, was not even awake to the fact that there was any such contest. What little evidence there is seems to point to the Alderman being the older form of government. The charters of privileges or liberties only mention the burgesses; and most of the early grants were grants to or by the burgesses or 'the community.' But in the Parchment Register (f. 86) there is a lease, dated Whitsunday 1303, by 'the alderman and community' of the common in Lathegate, a strip of waste by the side of what is now called Lairgate, for forty years at 6d. a year. Yet in 1306 (p. 12) there was an election of twelve Keepers and an ordinance as to the form of their commission under the seal of the community. The earliest extant Account Roll among the borough records, that for 1344, is rendered by twelve Keepers (custodientium villam). In the Paper Register (f. 31) there is an Indenture of S. Mark's day 1345 which witnesses that the community have elected twelve persons sworn (juratos) to keep the town for the ensuing year. Their powers are then set out word for word as in the Magna Carta, beginning with the last paragraph printed on page 3, down to the end of the third paragraph on page 4, followed by, though in a different order, most of the other provisions of the Magna Carta, but with no table of tolls; while at the end is a provision forbidding the sale of cloth except at the Dyngs, under a penalty of 8d. for every cloth sold elsewhere. In 1356 a riot at the election of the twelve governors produced a special commission from the King³ addressed, not, as Poulson supposes, to six of the keepers, but, as the names, headed by Walter of Fauconberg and Miles Stapleton, show, to great men of the county, to hold inquiry on the matter. The commission recites the complaint of the 'good men of the town of Beverley,' how it was an immemorial custom for them and their ancestors, 'the men and the tenants of the town,' to assemble at the Gild Hall on S. Mark's Day (25 April), and 'elect twelve of the most wealthy and honest men' of the same 'to maintain and govern the town and the laws and customs thereof'; but on this occasion a great number of malefactors in warlike array drove out of the Gild Hall those who had assembled for the election, so that no election took place; and 500 of them had formed a conspiracy under oath to prevent the 'good men' of the town from doing anything, 'and so the said town and the men thereof are destitute of watch and ward to our contempt and prejudice, and to the manifest danger of the destruction of the town and of the men aforesaid.' From this it would appear that the government by twelve Keepers was an oligarchy of the richer classes; the Alderman and Chamberlains representing a democratic dictatorship.

The mode of election as set forth in the Magna Carta of 1215 is certainly oligarchical. The outgoing Keepers (p. 1) nominated eighteen of 'the better and substantial (probioribus et sufficientibus) of the community, who had not served as keepers for the three years next preceding,' and from these eighteen the 'community' elected the twelve. Who the community were does not appear. I adopt the word 'community' to represent communitas, because it is colourless and has no special connotation. If it is translated 'commune,' or 'commons,' or even 'commonalty,' which is the word used in the Beverley records themselves in the last part of the sixteenth century when (p. 59, cf. 115) the town documents first began to be written in English, various notions and theories as to its meaning are imported which may be right but are more probably wrong. As the 'whole community' could, theoretically at least, assemble in the Gild Hall, and as the word seems to be used as interchangeable with 'burgesses,' it would seem that it could not be a very large body. Probably the 108 names in Archbishop Wykwan's charter were intended to be an exhaustive list of the free tenants under the archbishop, the free burgesses who formed the community. This view is supported by the fact that in the first two Account Rolls the number of persons paying entrance fees is only six and eight respectively. From an order of 1367 (p. 17) it would seem that only the purchase of at least 100 feet of land would entitle a person to become a burgess, and therefore free of toll, otherwise than by descent. In that case the forty-eight persons who, under the Magna Carta, were ensured their turn of government, were not very far short of half the whole body, and, even if the number had increased since then, would at all events be a considerable minority, and of course include the richest and most influential portion of the whole. Compared with the 1,100 and odd males whom the Poll-tax return of 1377 reveals, the keepers and their electors were an aristocratic oligarchy. But among themselves they were a democratic body. The care taken to prevent re-election of the same persons over and over again is characteristically oligarchical. Within the privileged circle equality is equity. No outsider need apply, but the insiders must as far as possible take office turn and turn about. There is to be no picking and choosing; above all, there must be no 'merit' about it.

The constitution settled in 1359 lasted for many years; but not without interruptions. While we have evidence of the existence of twelve Keepers in 1362, 1365, 1367, 1371, 1377, it is admitted in a charter, or rather writ, of Richard II. in 1382, that the government by Alderman had been resorted to at least twice in the fifty years before (p. 7). In that year 'in place of the twelve good men,' the king tells 'all the good men and burgesses' that 'excesses, evils and dangers have, as is sufficiently notorious, been more than usually common in these days in the town of Beverley.' 'The people had chosen an Alderman and two Chamberlains, 'and this order, which has not been seen in the town aforesaid for fifty years or more, except twice or less (bis vel rarius), you intend to maintain and continue, although the government of the said twelve men is far better for the good rule of the town.' The king directs them, therefore, on St. Mark's day next, the usual election day, to resort to the election of twelve men.

Somehow or other the contest between Alderman and Chamberlains on the one side and the Keepers on the other seems to have been identified with the struggle between poor and rich; and to have been connected with 'the Peasants' Rising.' It is difficult to say whether there was any real connection or whether, as usual in times of the White Terrors, which invariably follow revolutionary movements, the rich found it sufficient to ticket their adversaries with the popular badge to insure justice being denied and the severest penalties being inflicted on them. A French writer, M. André Réville,¹ was the first to draw attention to the records bearing on this question. Poulson, in his 'Beverlac,' had cited the grant of a pardon to Beverley in 1382, from the Parliament Rolls¹ as showing that it had been implicated in the Peasants' Rising. M. Réville argued that Beverley rose because of the illegal oppressions it had suffered at the hands of the rich. But neither he nor Poulson was acquainted with the fact, derived from the document already quoted, that there was a constitutional struggle going on between two parties in the town over the form of government. Even now the story as gathered from the records is so scrappy that it is almost impossible to form a determined judgment on the question. At all events the struggle at Beverley, if it was connected with the Peasants' Rising, broke out, not, as Mr. Trevelyan supposes,² after the rising had been suppressed in the south, but before. The struggle was conducted, even according to the allegations of the ultimately victorious party, by abuse of legal process, not by mere mob violence. The first we hear of it is in a writ from the crown De supersedendo addressed to John Bygod, dated 25 May 1381, directing him and the other justices of the peace for the archbishop's liberty of Beverley to return all writs and indictments before them to chancery.³ The reason given was that the king had heard that dissensions had broken out between the good men (probos homines) and the commonalty (communibus) and that divers unlawful accusations had been made, and riots were feared; so he called the matter up before himself. Now it was in the last week in May, a day or two after this writ, that the Peasants' Revolt broke out against the Poll-tax Commissioners in Essex, and it was the first week in June that Kent rose. Nothing was done on the writ of 25 May 1381. The writ was repeated on 18 March 1382, and the indictments in question are set out on the Coram Rege Roll.⁴ We learn from this that the first indictment had been on Friday after S. John of Beverley's day 4 Richard II., i.e. Friday after 7 May 1381. It alleged that Adam Coppandale senior, Stephen Coppandale and twelve others had the Tuesday before gone 'to the Common Hall of the Gild of S. John of Beverley in Walkergate, and there feloniously stolen 20l. in money, the common seal of the town, and divers charters and muniments of the community kept in sacks, to the value of 100l.' They had also with Adam Tondew (Tondue) in 1377 taken 100l. from rates (misis) granted by the said community to the Archbishop of York for Westwood. They had obstructed the common ways by building over them;

and had broken into John Rasy'n's house at night, and seized an axe worth 6s. 8d. and other things.

Another indictment, found on 24 May, charged Thomas of Beverley with having gone in 1379 into 'the common hall called the gyldhall of Beverley' and stolen 80l. of the community's, and also with obstructing the streets by building over them; while Adam Coppandale and the others were charged with stealing from the Common Hall charters and muniments and silver vessels belonging to the community on Tuesday after S. Mark's day 1381. Also, Robert Butemond stole a chest full of 'jewels' (i.e. plate) out of John of Wetwang's house, while Richard Ravenser, archdeacon of Lincoln, aided and abetted him. This last charge was tried out. It gives the measure of the rest. For Butemond was the bailiff of the Chapter Fee; Wetwang was a tenant on it, who had killed a man and fled; as a fugitive felon his goods escheated to the lord, the chapter; and Richard of Ravenser as Canon Residentiary shared in the proceeds of the chest lawfully seized by Butemond in the course of his official duty. The other cases were not tried, because the accused all pleaded pardons granted by the king in April and May 1382 for all offences committed before 14 December 1381, and were acquitted. It seems that the stealing the money of the community was only 'a way of putting it.' It meant that during the constitutional struggle the party of the Governors, forcibly or secretly, removed the treasury and muniments to which they laid claim. The so-called extortion of 100l. paid to the archbishop for the purchase of Westwood was of course money well laid out for the benefit of the community, as above related; while Thomas of Beverley was the archbishop's bailiff, and the money he 'stole' was no doubt some money due to the Archbishop by way of tax or toll. The trial took place in the King's Bench and the pardons were pleaded in Easter Term 1382.

While the indictments were still pending before 'Bigod and his fellows' some urgent writs were sent out by the Crown.¹ On 26 September 1381 the archbishop's bailiffs were informed that 'certain malefactors of the town and disturbers of the peace, conspiring together to oppress the better and more substantial burgesses, had stirred up the mean and less substantial men of the community to rise against them; and had made them through fear of death put their hands to bonds for the payment of large sums of money,' probably for the sums alleged to have been stolen or extorted. The bailiffs were to stop all proceedings on the bonds till the case had been considered in Parliament. On 12 October a general commission of the peace and of oyer and terminer for the North was issued to John of Gaunt and others, the insurrection being then at an end. On 20 December a 'protection' or safe-conduct was issued for Thomas of Beverley, Adam Coppandale and others of that party to attend Parliament to give information 'touching certain evil doers in the insurrection.' The bonds were, however, still held in terrorem over them, as in February and April 1382¹ the then Alderman and Chamberlains and the archbishop's bailiffs were directed to seize the Alderman and Chamberlains and Common Clerk of the year before, and send them up to the Council with the bonds. On 16 June² the archbishop, 'on account of discord between the burgesses and other men' of Beverley, was directed to take security in 100 marks each for the good behaviour of Geoffrey Brydon 'souter' or cobbler, and John White tyler, and sixty-seven others of the 'meaner' sort, 'and all other men of the town,' except Adam Coppandale, and Thomas de Beverley and fifty others apparently belonging to the 'better' sort, who had already given security. Proceedings were no doubt stayed and the bonds cancelled in Parliament, as we hear no more of them. But at the end of June the Coram Rege Roll³ shows Thomas of Beverley and Richard his son indicted before the Duke of Lancaster and Robert Tresilian for extorting from the community on Sunday after Christmas 1381 'by threats and duress (rigorem) 600 marks by the hands of J. Lekyngfeld' and six others named. They, too, pleaded general pardons which they had received on 17 March because 'of their good service done before a certain insurrection.'

Yet in a pardon given to the burgesses and community of Beverley on 18 October 1382,⁴ for which bonds for payment of 1100 marks were taken, Thomas of Beverley and his son were specially exempted together with Richard of Boston, the ex-common-clerk, and seven others whose names have not previously appeared, but some of whom certainly belonged to the party of the meaner sort. Finally, as late as Easter Term 1385, the Coram Rege Roll shows John of Erghom, Erghum or Ergum, as he is described, to have been indicted with others before the Duke of Lancaster and his fellows for a series of oppressions and extortions committed over the whole period from 1363 downwards. Thus 'poundale' and 'bust-silver,' or charges of $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for every pound's worth of merchandise sold in the market, and $\frac{1}{2}$ d. on every victualler's shop, had been granted in 30 Edward III for seven years. Erghum and his associates—no doubt the Twelve Keepers—had levied it for twenty years, taking, for instance, 4s. 4d. from John Gorton, 12s. from John Lyndelow, and 6s. 8d. from Thomas Middleton, the Alderman of 1381. Again, in 1379 they had taken 100 marks from the community for Westwood, whereas only 100s. was due (a confusion, probably wilful, between the fine paid down and the annual rent reserved for Westwood). Again, in 42 Edward III. Beverley and Hull had jointly to build a barge for the Crown. Erghum and company collected 40s. too much, and then in 48 Edward III. sold this barge for 40l. and pocketed the money. Then there is a long tale as to some murder which, according to the story, John Erghum and others committed by assault in the streets and then persuaded the widow to appeal others of 'the meanest sort' for it; which let them in for 40l. for costs. Elected keepers of the town in 1377, they took 200l. from Geoffrey Bredon and others 'up to this day.' In 1382 they assaulted Richard of Midelton (the bailiff of the year before) and imprisoned him till he gave a bond for 200l.; and made John Lekyngfeld give another bond for 100l. In 1380 they took 'bust-silver' and 'pundale' by extortion from the crafts. Thus, from Thomas de Midelton and John of Skirlaw 20s. each, and from others of 'Draperescraft' 10s.; from 2 mercers 40s. and 20s. and from the rest of the 'ars mercerie' 20s., and similarly from the skinners ('ars peletrie') 20s., butchers ('ars bocherie') 10 marks; cobblers', tailors', tanners', and websters' crafts 40s. each; wrights and dyesters 20s., bakers ('baxters') a mark, and 'from all other craftsmen, victuallers, and workmen, 20l.,' and so for twenty years before. Further, in 1381 they killed William of Halden in the street with a pollax, two sparths, six swords, two forks, and other arms, striking him on the head so that his brains gushed out, and then hurling his body into the ditch called the Beck in Walkergate. To all which allegations John of Erghum pleaded a pardon dated 15 November 1382, for which he paid 10l. into the hanaper; which was to go pro tanto in exoneration of the fine of 1100 marks inflicted by the Duke of Lancaster and the rest, 'and so he went quit.' And here ends the record.

It is clear that the struggle was not directly connected with the Peasants' Rising; and that it was carried on chiefly by indictments and counter indictments, each party, as it gained the upper hand, partly no doubt by violence, but still under legal forms, forcing its opponents to give heavy bonds for good behaviour; and the whole ending in mist and mystery. It seems also clear that at first the government by Alderman and Chamberlains was the more democratic; but yet, in spite of the king's writ in March 1382, they were elected in April 1382. We do not know what form was adopted in 1383 and 1384, but in 1385 and 1386 we know that Alderman and Chamberlains were again elected, the account roll for the latter year being extant. But the names show that by that time, as invariably happens in the long run, the 'better sort' had captured the democratic citadel, for Adam Coppandale was chamberlain in 1385 and Thomas Gervays in 1386. Afterwards, the election seems to have quietly reverted to the twelve Keepers; and government by an Alderman faded into the limbo of historical memory. After the struggle, the last state of the government of Beverley was more oligarchical, narrow, and plutocratic than the first.

The Town and the Craft Gilds.

When things had settled down after the great rising, quiet times seem to have ensued. We hear no more of any constitutional matters until we come to a mysterious document in 1456 (p. 50), when the Keepers or Governors and sixteen 'venerable and circumspect persons,' together with 251 others of various crafts, led by the aldermen and stewards of their crafts, registered their determination 'to be favourable and contribute scot and lot towards the preservation of the liberties of the town.' It is probable that this was in view of an attempt made to procure a charter from Henry VI. enlarging the powers of the Governors, and especially obtaining the right to appoint justices of the peace which had been granted them by a charter of 18 Feb. 2 Henry V., but repealed on the petition of the archbishop on 16 March following.¹ A document headed 'Divers petitions not confirmed by the King in all things' is given in the Paper Register.² At the next election-day (p. 50) the common burgesses claimed 'to have their ancient contributions as contained in the register of the crafts (arcium),' and that the account should be taken in the presence of the aldermen and stewards of all the crafts, eighteen in number. At the same time they demanded that the election should be held as usual out of the eighteen better and worthier burgesses, according to the Magna Carta. A similar resolution was repeated in 1460 (p. 51), with the addition of a requirement that everyone who was a brother of a craft must also be a burgess, and that no grithman or sanctuary man should be a burgess, even if he got a grant from the king. In 1465 (p. 51) the contest, whatever it was, came to a head in a riot at the election, for which seven of the rioters were seized and imprisoned by the Governors acting in concert with the aldermen of all the crafts, and 'the forty-eight,' who thus appear, without explanation, for the first time. The prisoners appealed to the Archbishop, George Neville, who decided that they must apologise to the Governors 'and pray them to be their good masters and friends,' and give bonds for their good behaviour. Two years later, in 1467 (p. 53), New Orders were issued by the Keepers or Governors, with the consent of all the good men of the town, and the aldermen and stewards of all the crafts, 'for the reform of certain abuses about contributions' (those, no doubt, which were referred to in the common burgesses' manifesto in 1457 and probably provoked the riot of 1465), 'and unlawful customs prevailing among the burgesses and inhabitants, and for the common good of the whole community.' It is to be noted that nearly all the orders refer, not to the constitution of the town council, but to the rules and regulations of the craft guilds, and their relations to the keepers and governors. The only orders directly affecting the latter were that they were henceforth to be called 'Aldermen, Keepers or Governors,' and that very cumbrous style was to be used in all proclamations and orders 'since anciently the town used to be ruled and governed by an alderman.' Ex-governors were not to be made constables (p. 58). Any of the 'forty-eight' who had been a governor was to attend when summoned (p. 55). The Governors were to determine all disputes between burgesses, except as to debts. Craft-gild meetings were only to be held in the Gild Hall when summoned by the Governors. For the craft regulations, it was ordered that anyone of any condition might set up as a master-craftsman in Beverley, without any payment for the first year, except to the light and castle of his craft¹; but that afterwards, as long as he should not become a burgess, he should pay a shilling a year to the Governors and a shilling to his craft-gild, as a tribute, which is probably the sense of 'contribution.' An appeal was to lie to the Governors if anyone was dissatisfied with the accounts of his craft-gild, and all non-burgesses who were admitted masters or members of craft-gilds were first to be presented by the alderman and stewards to the Governors and take an oath of fealty to the community.

The rest of the orders of 1467 dealt with specific trades. A large number were concerned with the building trades, carpenters, tilers (who include tile-thatchers, tile-wallers, or, as we should say, brick-layers, and plasterers), sawyers, and 'panners'; settling the hours of work in the minutest detail, and putting down certain arrangements of a trades-union character in the trade. One order, and only one, was of a sanitary character, forbidding any new brick-kiln nearer the town than existing ones, on account of the stink and the destruction of fruit-trees. These orders bear witness to the fact that the town council was more and more being dominated by and identified with the members of the craft-gilds. It may be remembered that, in 1375, the London Common Council was elected by the craft-gilds, and that an Act of Parliament for London in 1475 has been interpreted as confining the franchise of the city to members of the gilds.

At Beverley in 1498 a further step in the direction of identifying the town council with the craft gilds was taken. The Governors issued new orders countersigned by the aldermen, the first issued in the English tongue. They confined the Governors to the liverymen of the crafts. 'No gentleman, yeoman or craftsman of the town be taken to worship of the town, but alone that bears charge of clothing, castle and pageant within the said town.' The second order repealed in effect the ordinance of 1467 and prevented anyone from carrying on trade unless he was a liveryman of that trade. 'No man shall occupy no occupation, but only that he is brother of, and in clothing.' Five years later the election was confined within still further limits. According to the Magna Carta the outgoing Governors had to name eighteen burgesses who had not been governors the three years preceding, and the twelve were elected from them. It is stated in the ordinance of 1498 that the practice then was for the Governors and certain burgesses, 'warned before,' to select twelve of the number of 'the thirty-six'—a body who here make their appearance for the first time—so that none of the twelve had been in office for two years past; and also other twelve who had been in office, and six other 'worshipful and famous,' i.e. of good fame, 'of whom none had been in office' before. From those thirty the election took place. This narrow circle of election, putting forward only six new men out of thirty, was not narrow enough for the men then in power. The 'election' was again cut down to eighteen, twelve selected from 'the thirty-six, or three benches,' and six others taken through the town at the pleasure of the Governors. When any of the thirty-six died, was sick, 'diffamed,' or fallen to poverty, his place was to be supplied by 'another sufficient burges wheresoever he shall be found by all the town.'

We hear no more of any changes in the constitution until 1535, when (p. 64) the 'pease' of the town was so much disturbed at an election as to come under the fatherly care of the Star Chamber. The neighbouring gentry had interfered in the election and opposed the power of the archbishop. Apparently the grievance was one already felt in 1498, when the gentlemen were excluded, for it was ordered that none dwelling out of the town should interfere in the election, nor any gentleman living out of the town become eligible for being a Governor merely by qualifying by purchase of land in the town, and specially that Sir Ralph Ellerker and his son-in-law, Oswin Ogle, should be ineligible for election. 'Old Sir Ralph Ellerker, knight,' who received a special injunction from the Star Chamber, was an old opponent of the archbishops' power. An interesting and amusing document¹ is preserved at Rawcliffe Hall among the archives of Mr. Ralph Creyke, a descendant of the Robert Creyke 'esquier' who was concerned in the dispute, which shows Sir Ralph Ellerker in the capacity of an arrant poacher being brought to book by no less a personage than Cardinal Wolsey himself. The scandalous way in which the spiritual power of S. John of Beverley was brought to bear on the unhappy knight makes it easy to understand why the bulk of the upper classes of the laity looked on with ready glee at the spoliation of the spiritual lords.

There is a large bundle of papers in the Star Chamber records,² which show that the Archbishop, Edward Lee, had interfered in the election of 1585 in favour of the retention of power by the Governors of that year for the next year. There was a riot; and an appeal to the Star Chamber resulted in the setting aside of the election of the old Governors. But the order concluded that the Archbishop 'shall have the order and rule of the said town in like manner and form' as their predecessors. The Archbishop thereupon assumed a right to nominate the twelve Governors. The inhabitants sent a deputation to him at Cawood asking him not to interfere. He, however, merely sent privately to the existing Governors to prevent a new election. The inhabitants broke into the Common Hall and held an election. This time the Archbishop appealed to the Star Chamber.

The elaborate agreement³ of 5 Nov. 1586 between the Archbishop, Edward Lee, and Robert Creyke, esquier, John Wright, gentleman, Robert Raffuls, Robert Gray, and other burgesses of the town shows that he took little by his appeal. It sets out the rights of the Archbishop to 'the Sheriff's Tourn or Court Leet,' to the appointment of clerk of the market and of justices of the peace, and all the profits arising from fines and amercements from such courts and markets. Yet such was the 'tender love' of the most reverend father that he granted the burgesses the free election of 'a comen cownsaile' of thirty-six; vacancies to be filled by the Governors—who were twelve of the thirty-six—nominating two of the most substantial who were 'of vesture and castell' for the 'cominaltie' to choose one. The Governors themselves were to be elected out of the twenty-four by the votes of the 'occupacions,' each meeting separately under the presidency of its alderman and recording its vote in writing, those having the majority of votes of the occupations being elected. Two brothers or brothers-in-law who were Governors or burgesses were only to vote as one person, and no retainer or liveryman of any spiritual or temporal lord was to be a councillor. The twenty-four were to be summoned only for weighty matters. Two of the Governors were to act as clerks of the market; and each 'occupation' was to appoint two searchers, and they were to return all offences to the Archbishop's court, dividing the fines with the Archbishop. The burgesses were to have the right of pricing all fuel and victuals which were to be sold at the Beck or at Grove Hill. Sanctuary men 'occupying any craft or misterie' were to pay to the 'upholding of castle and clothing' as other men.

This must have been one of the latest acts of the archbishops as lords of Beverley. Their ecclesiastical dominance had hung round the necks of the burgesses for centuries and prevented them from attaining the freedom which other towns of their size and importance had long attained. The end, however, was now at hand. It was part of Henry VIII.'s policy, in asserting the royal supremacy, to make the bishops exchange their temporal lordships for spiritual possessions taken from the dissolved monasteries. Thus the lordships of Beverley and Southwell and many more passed from the hands of the archbishops to the Crown. The transfer bore fruit. Under Queen Mary (1554) ¹ the Governors were granted all tolls in the town, the fair-tolls hitherto belonging to the archbishops no longer being exempted. Under Queen Elizabeth (24 July 1572) ² the town finally obtained a mayor and corporation, with a prison and court of record, view of frankpledge, justices of the peace, the profits of the courts, and return of burgesses to Parliament—a privilege which the town had enjoyed under Edward I. and Edward II., but never since.

The Municipality at work.

The Keepers or Governors performed most of the functions of a modern Town Council and a good many more, only they worked under special charters rather than under general Acts of Parliament. They managed of course the common property of the town : the Dings, the pastures, the tilery. They levied from individuals the taxes, which were assessed, not on individuals, but on the community as a whole. The earliest extant account, that for 1844, shows them active in getting the assessment of the town lowered from 100l. to 50l. with heavy bribes or gifts to the royal officials in the process. They also levied the 'presents' which the town had to make to its lord, the archbishop. 'The boxes theretofore used' by which assessments were raised appear in these accounts. The tax on resident burgesses (p. 2) was accounted for by two persons in each of eleven localities, of which in that year the Fishmarket, now called Wednesday market, contributed the most, 18s. ; while the box of Lathgate only produced 4s. 10d.

Under the heading of 'Merchants' Box' an elaborate debtor and creditor account was entered into with each of some fifty-six individuals. Thus : 'William of Lockington. The community is bound to him in 20s. lent for the present to the Archbishop, and he is bound to the community, for the assessment of John of Felton, 8s. 4d. ; and for 3000 tiles taken of the community, 7s. 6d. ; and for 3000 tiles taken of the community in that year, 7s. 6d. ; and so reckoning all, the community is bound to him 20d. ; and he owes nothing to the community for his box up to' Lady Day. 'Robert of Scorburch, butcher, paid for his box to the said feast, 1s. 6d. ; Robert of Scorburch, draper, owes for his box to the said feast, 22d.' The total amount levied in 1344 was 83l. 16s. 6½d., and the amount expended 83l. 16s. 8½d. ; deficit 2d. The pavage receipts and expenses were kept separately. The receipts were seemingly levied on the inhabitants of the streets paved during the year, as is still done for a new street. In 1866, the year of the second extant account roll, the boxes no longer appear only as Merchants' boxes, but under the headings of twelve different trades. There were Butchers' boxes, thirteen in number ; Bakers', nine ; Tanners', thirty ; Ketches', fifteen ; Brewsters', fifteen (one of whom, the wife of William of Lockington, combined cloth making with brewing) ; Carpenters', fourteen ; Dyers', three ; Ironmongers', three ; Fishers', twelve (five fishers were women) ; Tilers', five ; Skinners', two, and Merchants', seventy-six. The total receipt for the year, including pavage, was no less than 165l., or more than three times what it had been twenty-two years before. Two hundred years later, in 1562, without pavage, the total receipts were 297l.

Besides these ordinary Town Council expenses the Keepers were responsible for the assize of bread and ale, and generally for the protection of the community against fraudulent tradesmen. This will be dealt with à propos of the gilds. They were responsible for the defence of the town and the contribution of its contingent to the army. The community—that is, the burgesses—had to be present at the watch each in his best array, when the Keepers thought fit to order a ‘watch,’ i.e. a review of the armed force of the town (p. 15), or pay a shilling fine. The Keepers also had to see that the innkeepers harboured none but honest folk; and no stranger was allowed to stay more than sufficient time for coming and going, unless he was registered with the Keepers (p. 15). In the fifteenth century Minute Book there are many entries showing how the Keepers furnished their quotas of men-at-arms and archers for the king’s armies, found them arms and clothes, pay and provisions.

The military responsibilities of the Keepers were less frequent and less important than their legal functions. It was in this respect chiefly that they felt the ecclesiastical pressure. In other towns—Lincoln and Leicester, for instance—the corporations as early as the days of John obtained the right to hold their own pleas in their own courts, to elect their own bailiffs and to record their charters and wills of land in the portmanmote or borough moot. The men of Beverley never got those privileges, because they would have trenched on the rights of Holy Church. They made many and gallant attempts in this direction. They limited the arbitrary powers of the stewards and bailiffs (pp. 9–10), but they never obtained the right of electing their own stewards or bailiffs. In 1354 (p. 43) they attempted to keep their ecclesiastical causes more or less at home, by providing that no burgess or neighbour of Beverley should summon another burgess or neighbour before any ecclesiastical judge except the Dean of Beverley. This was directed against taking cases in the first instance before the Archbishop’s court at York. At the same time (p. 44) it was ordered that no burgess may plead or cause to be impleaded another by writ or in any other court for any cause or charge (i.e. civil or criminal) unless he first shows his grievance to the Keepers sitting in the Gild Hall. Those at issue were to submit to the arbitration of the Governors; penalty 6s. 8d. Yet nearly a century afterwards (p. 45) the Keepers or Governors had to fine a contumacious person who had asserted that the Governors had done what they would have dearly liked to do de jure, and did de facto: namely, hold before themselves pleas which properly belonged to the spiritual and temporal courts of the Archbishop. The Archbishop had himself in 1434 delivered 'a bill' to the Governors¹ complaining that 'the said Governors had confedered and constituted among them in derogation of the lord's court that what man that is enfranchised and sueth in the lord's court for debt, trespass or other cause, before the time that he hath made complaint to the said Governors and have their leave, he shall pay a noble to the said Governors, or else lose his burgesse-ship.' That the order of 1354 was effectively enforced the Keepers' own Minute Book bears witness.

Moreover, although the Governors were not a court of record, yet it was a common practice to enter into bonds and deeds before them. Thus 11 September 1436,² 'Thomas Lumbard of Beverley came here before Robert Rolleston and his fellows, the twelve Keepers of the community of the town of Beverley, and acknowledged (cognovit) that he owed Stephen Tilson of Beverley and Thomas Lange of the same 10l. of silver of usual English money to be paid to them or one of them, their attorney, heirs, or executors in form underwritten,' viz. by instalments of 20s. on successive feasts four times a year till the whole is paid. 'For which payments well and faithfully to be made the said Thomas Lumbard binds himself, his heirs and executors and all his goods.' Again, 5 March 1437, William Souleby of Beverley, 'gentilman,' and Thomas Davell enter into a bond for 20l. with the condition of abiding by the award of the twelve Governors in a case of trespass which the Abbot of Rivaux is bringing against Margaret Tyrwhit and Souleby as to the right to a certain bank in which the abbot alleges trespass to have been made.

So in 1437³ 'Thomas White and William Lorymer, mercer, were chosen as independent persons (indifferentes) between John Grene, complainant, and Roger Cokirham, defendant, for all actions depending between them, so that their award be given by Easter week next; for which John and Roger gave security to Thomas Skipwith and their fellows.' On 22 March is the entry: 'Law. Alise Alkebarow has leave to prosecute the common law against William Warner, yeoman.' But it was mainly through the craft gilds that the Keepers to a large extent acquired indirectly the powers the direct exercise of which they were deprived of through the jealousy of the ecclesiastical lord.

II. The Craft Gilds or Trade Companies.

The history of the town government of Beverley from 1381 onwards is, as we have seen, the story of its gradual conquest by the craft gilds which it regulated or professed to regulate. As regards these gilds themselves, the history is extremely obscure.

The Merchants or Mercers.

What seems certain is, that while the Merchant Gild was granted as one of the chief privileges of the free burgesses of the town, in 1180, and was apparently co-extensive with the burgesses, it afterwards came to be reckoned as only one, though indeed the premier one, among many other craft gilds. Poulson, indeed, has given utterance to statements respecting the Merchant Gild, identifying it with the town government, which continue to be accepted and repeated as authoritative, though they are absolutely without authority and are totally inconsistent with the evidence he himself adduces. Thus he says¹ that 'twelve men of the guild were chosen yearly to represent their fellow-burgesses, called par excellence, the twelve governors or keepers of the town of Beverley.' As we have seen, there is not a word relating to the election of the Keepers to show that they were members of the Merchant Gild, nor is there any mention of the Merchant Gild in connection with the election. Equally unfounded is his further statement, quoted as a matter of fact by Dr. Cunningham,² that 'another regulation of this gilda mercatoria, or merchant fraternity, was appointing lesser gilds with an alderman or warden to each, so that each description of trade was governed by its own particular rules, subject to the approbation and control of the twelve Governors.' That the gilds were subject to the control of the twelve Governors is true. But the Merchant Gild had no control over the other gilds, and was, in the times of which alone we have any knowledge of its working, itself controlled by the twelve Governors. For when in 1446 (p. 74) they exhibited 'the orders and constitutions of the brotherhood of the Merchant Gild of Beverley in the Gild Hall,' they were diligently examined by the twelve Governors, and 'because they [the Governors] found and felt some difficulties to their consciences and understandings, they ordered the underwritten orders to be registered and for ever observed in the form' which followed, on the petition of the Alderman and Stewards and with the assent and consent of the brethren of the brotherhood of the gild aforesaid.

One fact alone is enough to show that the community and its elected Keepers were not identical with the Merchant Gild. The twelve Keepers paid a rent to the Merchant Gild for the use of the Gild Hall. Thus in the account roll for 1386, 8s. was paid for 'rent of the Gild Hall' to Hugh, servant of the chapel of S. Mary, and 20s. 'to Sir Walter, chaplain of the gild of S. John.' In 1405 these items occur in the form: 'To the gild of S. John for the Gildhall, 20s.; to the chapel of the Blessed Virgin for payment of fee farm rent of the Gild Hall, 8s.' In 1409, under 'Rents Paid,' are the words, 'to the Merchant Gild of S. John for the Gild Hall, 20s.' In 1416 the matter is made even clearer by taking this shape: 'Paid to the Alderman and Stewards of the Merchant Gild of S. John of Beverley for rent (firma) of the Gild Hall, 20s.,' and 'to the wardens of the fabric of the chapel of B. Mary for rent of assize of the said hall, 8s.' The Great Gild of S. John of Beverley and the Merchant Gild were one and the same; but they were not the same as the community or its Keepers who hired the Gild Hall from them. When the hiring began it is unfortunately impossible to make out. In the first Keepers' account roll, 1344, the only mention of the Gild Hall is in the paving accounts. They paved Walkergate (the fullers' street), which still exists, 'up to the Gild Hall.' In the next extant roll, 1366, they paid 'for rent of the Gild Hall to the chapel of the Blessed Mary for a whole year, 8s.,' and they paid 7s. 'for straw spread in the Gild Hall at different times,' but no rent to the gild of S. John or Merchant Gild for its use, as the Alderman, Chamberlains and, afterwards, the Keepers did, to the substantial amount of 20s. The inference would seem to be that in 1344 there was no Town Hall, except perhaps the Dyngs, on which in 1366 two new 'louvers' or roof openings were made at a cost of 33s. 10d. In 1359 the Magna Carta of the community was declared, as we have seen (p. xxi), in 'our Gildhall.' Whether in 1366 the Keepers only paid the quit-rent to the landlord, S. Mary's Church, being allowed the use rent-free; or whether the rent is omitted because no rent was paid in the course of it, we are in the dark. Certain it is that from 1386 to 1500 the account rolls regularly show the payment of a rent of 20s. a year to the Merchant Gild for the Gild Hall, and that the Keepers not only furnished it—buying a table-cover in 1386, and on another occasion a green cloth with a red fringe for it—but also did substantial repairs to it.

Apparently, as time went on, the Gild Hall had become inconvenient, as on 28 May 1434 (p. 47) efforts were made to obtain a new Town Hall. The Governors decreed with the express assent and consent of all the venerable men of the whole town assembled in the Gild Hall, and others their co-burgesses, that the Governors should have power to lease for three years the 'common averis' (the crofts and lanes of Beverley in which the members of the community had rights of common at certain seasons) and apply the rents in building a new hall over the Dyngs. This order was solemnly signed by fifty-eight people called venerable, and the Alderman or Alderman and Stewards of eleven craft gilds. But letting the common seems to have produced a disturbance, as there are recorded divers orders in the year for the putting down of rebellion against the Governors and suits brought for 'malicious words against the Twelve.' On 12 August following, 1435, the order to let the lands was repealed by the Governors of that year.

At length, in 1500 (p. 63), a new Hall was bought at the Crossgarths, which is apparently the site of the present Town Hall, though called by a different name. This Hall was simply the private house, though described as a 'great messuage,' of Edward Minskyp. It was somewhat expensive, as the community paid for it one of its common pastures, called the Tongue, and 73l. 6s. 8d. in cash. The rent to the Merchant Gild for the Gild Hall of course ceased. From this time forward, when the Town Hall is mentioned it appears under the name of the Common Hall. The Gild Hall disappears from view.

The earliest extant ordinances of the Merchant Gild are those already mentioned for 1446, but their original ordinances are said in Queen Elizabeth's reign (p. 84) to have dated from the year 1210, and there is no reason to doubt the fact. In virtue of their superior antiquity, and also of their superior numbers (for, as we have seen before, they numbered at least 76 in 1366 as against 30 tanners, 14 carpenters, and 13 butchers), they took precedence of all other gilds alike in 1390 (p. 33) and in 1498 (p. 62). But they were distinctly included among the craftsmen (artifices) as early as 1390, not outside them, still less above them. Like other gilds, they had their castle on Rogation days in honour of S. John of Beverley (p. 76), and their light (p. 68) at the Trinity altar in the charnel in the chapel of S. Mary's. At the Corpus Christi Play they presented two pageants or plays (while other crafts had only one), viz. Black Herod¹ (in which Herod was always played with a black face, raging at his courtiers) and Domesday, or the Day of Judgment. They were indifferently called mercers (1390; p. 83), in Latin merceri (1446; p. 74), and marchaunts or marchands (p. 81), in Latin mercatores (1446; p. 74); and in their statutes of 1446 'merchants, mercers, and drapers (pannarii).¹ The special mention of the latter, the merchants in cloth, and their separation into a distinct gild in 1493 (p. 99), show the importance which the clothing trade possessed at Beverley. Indeed, of the twenty principal crafts mentioned in 1390 no less than six distinct gilds are entirely devoted to the cloth trade, the drapers, tailors, dyers, weavers, shearmen and fullers.

It was only the masters, who kept shop, who were obliged to belong to the gild; but everyone who made a business of buying and selling, or dealt, wholesale or retail, in anything he did not produce himself was a merchant. In 1503 (p. 81) at Beverley everyone who 'occupies buying or selling of marchaundies' to the extent of five marks a year—raised in the ordinances of 1582 (p. 90) to ten pounds—was to contribute to the Merchant Gild. So in the revised code of 1582 (p. 93) a special clause was enacted, or re-enacted, that every smith buying unwrought iron and selling it again 'not altered, converted, wrought and made in manner and form according to their science,' was to be a contributor to the Merchants' Gild. An earlier order of 1492 (p. 75) had specifically said the same of anyone living in Beverley who attended markets and fairs buying cloth to resell and retail in the town; and, after the drapers or cloth-merchants became a separate gild, yet if they bought sack-cloth to sell again by wholesale or retail, they had to become contributors also to the Merchant Gild. The two surveyors 'called seyrcheours' whom the merchants elected every year to search out and oversee the defects of the craft applied themselves especially (p. 28) to a survey of 'all weights, measures and ells.'

The Weavers' Laws.

The handicraft of which we hear earliest at Beverley was that of the weavers, about half a century or more later than Archbishop Thurstan's charter to the Merchant Gild. The laws or customs regarding weavers and fullers in various towns of England, of which Beverley is one, were printed from the *Liber Custumarum*¹ of London by Mr. Riley, which show that they were a race much to be despised or feared and trampled on. Just after a new ordinance made in Edward I.'s reign for the weavers of London, which certainly gives the idea of a novel emancipation, comes the Lex Telariorum et Fullonum Wyntonie, followed by Lex eorundem apud Marleberge, apud Oxoniam et apud Beverley, all given in Norman French. There is little doubt that these were taken from a much earlier MS. in the British Museum¹ called by a modern binder Glanville Tractatus de Legibus, but which, after (the so-called) Glanville's treatise, gives a great many documents bearing on the laws and customs of London, none later than 9 John; the character of the handwriting being that of the last quarter of the twelfth century. The Weavers' and Fullers' Laws there given slightly differ from those given in the Liber Custumarum and are more archaic in their language. The rubric headings are in French instead of Latin: Co [sic] est la lai des teliers et des fuluns a Wincestre. Ceo est la lai de teliers et de fuluns de beuerle. The Winchester law is the fullest: 'Be it known that no weaver and no fuller may dry or dip cloth, nor go outside the town to do any trade; nor may they sell their cloth to any foreigner, but only to merchants of the city. And if it should happen that any of the weavers or the fullers for riches [or because he is rich: pur sa richesce] wishes to go out of the city to do a trade (merchandise faire), it is lawful for the good men of the city to take all that chattel and bring it forth into the city and deal with it as a forfeited chattel under the view (par esgard) of the sheriffs and good men of the city. And if any weaver or fuller sells his cloth to any foreigner, the foreigner loses the chattel and the other is at the mercy of the city for everything he possesses. Nor may any weaver or fuller buy anything which belongs to his mystery (mester, métier) unless he make agreement (face le gre) to the sheriff every year.' Now hitherto these regulations, strict and severe as they are, may be argued to be not much in excess of the later guild ordinances or trade union rules, which aimed at keeping everyone to his particular craft, or piece of a craft, just as nowadays a bricklayer may not touch plaster on the one hand, or stone on the other. But then comes the amazing clause, 'Nor may any free man be attainted [ataint, convicted] by any weaver or fuller, nor may they give evidence; and if one of them has grown rich, so that he wishes to give up (guerpir) his mystery, he shall forswear it and turn all his tools out of his house, and do so much to the city to be in the freedom': meaning, apparently, make a fine at the city's discretion to be admitted as a freeman. 'And this law,' concludes the extract, 'they have of the freedom and of the custom of London, as they say.'² The law of Marlborough says they cannot give evidence about any freeman. Then comes a very obscure passage. It seems to mean that if one of them buys a dish of meat (viande) above the value of 9d., he shall pay duty (sa custume) for all the surplus to the sheriff. He may not dye or work anything except for the good men of the town, nor have any property relating to making cloth worth a penny, except five ells to clothe himself each year. If he becomes so rich that he wants to get the freedom of the town, a year must pass during which he must see if he can live without his mystery, and next year he must pass the whole year at his ease, and the third year he must forswear (foriurer) his mystery to enter the freedom, if he can arrange the wherewithal so that the good men may be willing; and so that he may do no merchandise he must turn all his tools out of his house.

The law of Oxford contains an additional clause, that when a weaver dies his wife can only be married to a weaver if she wishes to follow the craft. 'Sa femme ne poet estre espousee si a telier nun, pur koi ele voelle suire cel mestier.'

Lastly comes the law of Beverley, 'la lai de teliers et de fuluns de beuerle.' 'To wit; that they can dry no cloth, nor go out of the town to do any trade; nor can any freeman be attainted by them, nor can they bear any witness; and if he [sic] wishes to forswear his craft he must do to him who is called mayor and the bailiffs of the town what will make him be received into the freedom of the town, and turn the tools out of his house. And this law they have in the freedom of London, as they say.'

The reference to the Mayor at Beverley is astonishing. If there really was one, and those who made the return were not merely speaking of Beverley in terms of the custom of London, which they professed to follow, then surely Beverley is the only town in England which, having a mayor in the twelfth century, lost him again for three centuries. But to return to our immediate point.

This extraordinary digest of the laws for the repression of weavers and fullers cannot be got rid of, as Mr. Gross essays to do in his Gild Merchant,¹ by showing that in the fourteenth century weavers were able to be burgesses. Still less can it be met by the further argument² that 'the Consuetudinary of Winchester, which seems to be contemporary with the documents in Liber Custumarum, clearly admits the construction that weavers were allowed to enjoy the municipal franchise, understood it (II. ii. 553) owing to the Liber Custumarum having omitted several words.

and hence that these documents applied only to an exceptional class of person.' For though the MS. of the 'Usages of Winchester'¹ is contemporary with the Liber Custumarum, i.e. is not very early in the fourteenth century, the latest entry in the British Museum manuscript of these 'Lais' is that of the London sheriffs of 1215; showing that they are at least a century earlier than Mr. Gross was led to suppose. The question is not what was the status of the craft gilds in the fourteenth century, when nobody denies that their members were not only admitted to but had already begun to seek the mastery of the town governments. The question is what was their position in the twelfth and early thirteenth centuries. The Pipe Rolls support the inference that it was one of existence on sufferance and under disabilities. Why else were they, like the Jews, paying separately and largely for the king's protection? In the Pipe Roll of 1154 the weavers of London pay two marks of gold for their gild, those of Oxford one mark of gold, those of Lincoln 6l. (which is the same thing), as do those of Winchester; the fullers paying the same for their gild, and 6l. for their mystery (pro ministerio suo). This word, by the way, goes to show that the word 'mystery' (mestier, métier) is not, as often asserted, equivalent to maistrise, or mastery of a craft, but is a corruption of the word meaning not 'mastery' but 'ministry,' 'service.' What was the difference between mystery and gild? Beverley not being a borough on the royal demesne, its weavers did not pay anything to the Crown for their gild, though probably they paid equivalently to the archbishop. The weavers of Huntingdon had their payment—'firma' it is called—increased from 20s. to 40s. that year. But it was not alone the weavers and fullers who had to bleed gold for the royal protection. The bakers of London also paid a mark of gold, and the shoemakers of Oxford an ounce or 15s. Now if these craftsmen were ordinary burgesses and members of the Merchant Gild, why these special payments, why these special gilds? In that very year the city of Lincoln paid 66l. 13s. 4d. for a gift, 60l. for an aid, and 22s. 6d. for the old farm, and the vast sum of 132l. 14s. for the new farm. Why should the weavers be separately taxed and organised, if as ordinary burgesses they already received the protection and the rights of free trade which the burgesses enjoyed? In London no Merchant Gild had been formed, though the Mercers Gild, as at Beverley, takes precedence of all the rest. London was a market always overt, and so, perhaps, all its free citizens might buy and sell freely.

Mr. Gross in the same place seems to maintain that the weavers were admitted to the franchise and the gild merchant in the twelfth century, and cites among others the Leicester Gild Roll. The authority would be conclusive, for the earliest Leicester Merchant Gild Roll is the earliest known, extending from 1196 to 1225. But Miss Bateson has printed it,¹ and never a weaver is to be found in it until the last year. In the entries for the year 1196 two dyers appear, the surety of one of them being expressly described as 'free dyer' (tinctor francus), while Robert, the son of Nicholas Carpenter, and a 'sopere' or soapmaker and his son and one smith are mentioned. Otherwise the names, nearly sixty, are purely territorial or professional. In 1199 two farriers, two parmenters, a carpenter's son, a parchment-maker, a smith who is son-in-law of a merchant, a free smith, a smith's son, a baker's son, are mentioned. In 1225 it is not a weaver but the son of a weaver who was admitted.² In 1260³ the gild merchant with the consent of the weavers and fullers made ordinances for them, among which was one that the fullers should have no 'morespechium,' or general meeting, except in the presence of two merchants members of the merchant gild; and in 1264⁴ the weavers were still not allowed to weave for anyone in the villages outside Leicester. In the time of Edward I.⁵ the weekly court of the Weavers' gild of London was to be held by the mayor, or four deputies of the trade appointed by him.

It has been conjectured by Mr. Riley, followed by Mr. Gross and Dr. Cunningham, that the weavers were Flemings, and therefore specially organised and protected. But this is a conjecture only. If true, it applies to the fullers also. Were the cordwainers of Oxford foreigners also, Spaniards? for their name, like their leather, was derived from Cordova, while the websters' name is as English as could be. And were the bakers of London French bakers? We know that when the Duke of Brittany came to visit Winchester College in 1895 he was given French bread, specially bought for the occasion,⁶ and it may have been bought from French bakers. But were the French bakers of London in the year 1200 numerous enough to have a gild, and to pay what cannot be put at less than forty times 6l. a year in our money for it? As Poulson pointed out,⁷ at the very time of which we are speaking some men of Beverley were concerned in an act of piracy against Spanish merchants who were exporting 'scarlet and other cloths of Beverley, Stamford, and York.' Are we to assume that they were all made by foreigners? There is no more reason for thinking the weavers to be foreigners than the butchers or the bakers. When we come to the ordinances of the Butchers of Beverley, we shall see that, even in the fourteenth century, they were not allowed to traffic in meat any more than the weavers were in cloth. The butcher was only allowed to sell the meat himself had butchered; as the weaver was only allowed to sell the cloth he had himself woven.

It is by no means clear that the weavers were in a more repressed condition than other craftsmen. But if they were it is probably because they were the earliest important class of landless industrial workers. It is an inveterate habit of antiquaries to assume that in the good old times men were all free and equal, and that in social as in political life there was a retrogression under which the free farmer, the free craftsman, gradually sank under the iron heel of the rich, landlord or manufacturer. Surely the evidence we have points the other way—to a gradual levelling up of the position of the common folk. First, the merchant who bought and sold, on a large scale or a small, accumulated profits and raised himself above the dead level of serfdom in his merchant gild of unknown antiquity. The combinations of various occupations actually engaged in handiwork, manual and probably menial occupations, came later. When they rose, it was not the common herd, the jacks of all the trades, the hired man, the servant, the journeymen or day labourers that formed the gilds, but the masters: those who by superior skill or luck had acquired the capital to enable them to get others to work for them, and exploit the products of their labour. In the Beverley gilds, we find that those occupations which rise first into notice, after the merchant gild, are those which deal in the necessities of life. When the town first developed from a township, the urban from the village community, the great majority of the inhabitants would, though serfs, be landholders. The early industries would be those connected with agriculture, and those who followed them would be landholders. The smith, like the parson, held land in consideration of performing necessary services, 'for making the iron parts of ploughs,' as it is phrased in one instance,¹ and the carpenter in like manner. The tailor appears early, and of course the miller. 'The manufacture of materials for clothing was the first industry in which a wide demand would make it worth while for men to entirely devote themselves to it,' says Mr. Ashley,¹ 'and therefore it was the first in which a special body of craftsmen appeared.' But he had to admit that the bakers appeared quite as early. So did the shoemakers, as we have seen, and the butchers had an adulterine gild in London in 1180. At Beverley the weavers were by no means the earliest gild. A solemn ordinance of 1431 (p. 35) settled the order in which the crafts were to go in the Corpus Christi procession, and gave precedence apparently according to the date of foundation, and placed the weavers only tenth, the merchants coming first, followed by butchers, bakers, carpenters, and smiths. Mr. Ashley argues¹ that the bakers 'could not be so numerous as weavers; and as the former manufactured for immediate consumption, they scarcely came into contact with the trading monopoly of the merchants.'

The Weavers' gild is first mentioned in the Beverley records in 1390 (p. 33), when the 'websters' are named nineteenth among the thirty-eight crafts who were to have plays on Corpus Christi day. The Ordinaciones Textorum were enrolled² on 4 November 1406, when 'to the honour of Almighty God and the honourable feast of the Assumption of the most glorious Virgin Mary and the honour of the glorious confessor S. John of Beverley and all God's saints, the masters of the craft of woollen weavers of Beverley (magistri artis textorum laneorum), desiring to solemnise and exalt the aforesaid feast of the Assumption, by their common consent and with the assent of the community of the town of Beverley, founded a light in honour of the name of the gild for themselves and certain others wishing to honour the said feast; and also consented that the underwritten orders should be made and decreed for the good governance of the same gild and for the maintenance of the honour of the castle of the Weavers yearly erected to the honour of the said glorious confessor S. John of Beverley.' They therefore first ordered a solemn Mass yearly in the chapel of S. Mary for the members of the gild; and a light, viz. a principal candle and four lesser candles, to be lighted during the said Mass, at which all members of the gild were to be present. Their election day for alderman, stewards and beadle (summonitoris) was on the feast of the Assumption (15 Aug.), besides which they had prime gilds and general meetings (congregationes) at the option of the alderman. Then followed the usual provisions for the light being lighted at the funeral of a brother or sister of the gild, and the burial of a poor member at the gild expense, penalties for not accepting office as alderman, steward or beadle, and for the settlement of quarrels by the gild officers. The journeymen are mentioned, but they were not full members of the gild. It was provided that a journeyman accused of fraud (falsitate) before the Keepers of the town, or the officers of the craft, should not be a servant to any master of the craft. New journeymen were to pay in the first year of their 'occupation' 8d., or 2d. a quarter, 'to the maintenance of the castle' (the master paid 2s. and was obliged to be a brother of the gild); while if a master owed any wages to a 'servant called journeyman,' and the alderman could not make him pay, complaint should be made to the Keepers, who could enforce payment by distress. In 1418 the entrance fee of a new brother was raised to 3s. 4d. and 1 lb. of wax; and every master taking an apprentice was to pay 2s. on doing so; and no one was to be a liveryman (vestiatur de secta cum magistris artis) until he had become a burgess. In 1445 every weaver of woollen cloth 'or of coverlates' who occupied as a master and was not a burgess was to pay 12d. to the expenses of the castle of the burgesses of the craft; 8d. to the maintenance of the play; and 4d. for the light. This was annulled, and 6d. for the play and 2s. for the light was substituted. In 1455 the annual payment for a non-burgess was raised still further to 3s. 4d. In 1496 the 'Ordynaunces of Weavers' are given in English, and it is then called, not the Gild of the Assumption, but 'the gylde of the Apostyls Petyr¹ and Paule.'¹ The first order provided for the election of aldermen being from one of eight masters named, whose place on decease or discharge was to be taken by another elected by the whole craft. Of these eight two were to be chosen by the outgoing alderman, from whom the 'journeymen breder' (brethren) of the craft were to choose one: a provision which shows a considerable rise in the journeymen's position. At the same time no one was to be allowed to become a journeyman until pronounced able by the alderman and four of his brethren.

The Fullers (Fullones) or Walkers, as they are called in 1890 (p. 38), whose business it was to tread or walk on (fouler) the cloth which the weavers wove, and who shared the indignities to which they were subject, appear earlier as an organised gild than the more important weavers. In 1896 (p. 32) they voluntarily came before the twelve Keepers and agreed that each should be attired in a like suit

p. 204), was apparently dedicated to S. Peter, as their fines went 'to the light of S. Peter.'

in honour of S. John of Beverley on Ascension Day every year; and, apparently in consideration of this, asked that anyone of them who quarrelled with his fellows should thenceforth pay 3s. 4d. to the community of the town and 3s. 4d. to the repair of the Fullers' castle. The Shearmen, on the other hand, who sheared the cloth the fullers trod, asked at the same time to be let off being a livery company. The ordinances of the Master-Fullers were registered¹ before the Governors in 1422. In 1432 the ordinances of the Shearmen,² newly inspected by the Governors, are expressly stated to have been immemorial. Their castle was between that of the Merchants and the Fullers. By 1469³ the Fullers and Shearmen had become one gild. But in the Corpus Christi Play while the former performed the 'Making of Adam and Eve,' the latter presented 'Adam and Seth.'⁴

The Bakers, Brewsters, and Butchers.

It seems probable that, as Mr. W. J. Ashley has pointed out,⁵ in most towns the merchant gilds monopolised all trade, until the Statute of 1385 enabled 'all merchants and all others of whatever estate or condition they may be that will buy or sell . . . at whatsoever place it may be . . . may freely . . . sell to what persons they please.' No craftsman in a gild town was allowed to trade even for his own products, but had to sell them to the merchants of the gild. They alone could sell them to 'foreigners'; while the foreigner (which does not necessarily mean an alien, but includes all who were not freemen) was forbidden (even in London) to remain for more than forty days. At Leicester as late as 1260, if a gildsman went with outside merchants to teach the ways of the country or help them to buy merchandise he lost his gild, and if not a gildsman, he was forbidden to come back to the town for a year and a day.⁶ Those who dealt in the necessities of life, the bakers, brewers, and butchers, were the first to be allowed to traffic in their own goods; though under strict regulation of time and place and manner. Thus, at Leicester, in 1279, it was a matter of special allowance that 'regraters' (here used apparently in the sense of victuallers or innkeepers) might buy calves, pigs, and sheep alive, and sell them cooked; and a butcher's wife, if she kept a 'regrate,' might sell meat cooked, but not raw—that would be to encroach on the butchers' rights, or to be a merchant in meat.

The keeping the Assizes of Bread and Ale was one of the most important duties of the town authorities, everywhere, if indeed it was not the first duty, out of which the town authority was developed. It is put in the forefront of the Ancient Customs of Beverley (p. 8) : 'These are the ancient customs and liberties of the town. . . . First, that every year the twelve Keepers, at the next court of the Archbishop after Michaelmas, in full court present six burgesses to keep the assize of bread and beer for that year.' These six were, at any time they thought fit, to take loaves from the bakers, which were to be weighed by the bailiffs of the Archbishop in their presence, and the amercements for short weight assessed by them, and delivered to the bailiffs on an indenture made between the bailiffs and the burgesses. Only during fair times, and between 1 August and Michaelmas day, might no assize be taken. At fair times, no doubt, the Archbishop's officers looked after the bakers, as the Bishop of Winchester's did during S. Giles's fair there. In August and September, harvest operations probably enabled the bakers to rob the king's lieges at pleasure. The only extant Town Minute Book, which begins in 1436, shows the assize in active working. Thus (f. 5 b) : 'At the court of the Archbishop, September 15 Henry VI. Bread weighing. Thomas Couke, baxter, had one white quartern loaf (unum panem album quadrantem) deficient in weight 2s. 6d. The same John had another white quartern loaf deficient in weight 2s. His fine was 4d. William Brown, baxter, had one white quartern ¹ loaf deficient in weight 2s. 6d.' He had another deficient 2s., 'and one whole quartern loaf deficient in weight 4s.' and another with the same deficiency. Fine, 8d. Roger Kedall had five white quartern loaves deficient from 2s. to 4s. in weight, two whole quartern loaves wanted 4s. of the due weight, and two 'quartern symnells' wanted 8s. 8d. Fine 8d. Two others were fined 4d. each, for similar defects. The entry ends : 'And be it known that the above-mentioned loaves were weighed to a quarter of wheat at 4s. 6d. And thereon the said bakers were ordered to bake according to the quarter of wheat at the sum named.' A taking (capcio) of bread was held at the Gild Hall on Christmas Eve, when Roger Kedall was fined a penny apiece for three 'long fewes,' which were defective in weight 4d., 5d., and 20d., respectively. On 26 July, at another 'taking' at the Gild Hall, Richard Ayer, baxter, was convicted of having two loaves of black bread deficient 4s. 8d. each, the quarter of wheat being 6s. In November next year, when Kedall and Brown were again found with defective loaves, the price was double, 12s. In 1499, Roger Kedall was fined 2s., wheat being then 14s. a quarter. In 1448, wheat being again down at 4s. 6d. a quarter, he was convicted for two white quartern loaves and two white half tortes (tortam albam de obolo). The torta was perhaps the modern twist. In London, the bakers of tourtes and of payn blaunke were two different and rival branches of the trade; the latter complained of the former, in 1921, that they now 'bolted' their meal and made white bread.¹ The 'whole loaf,' according to the same authority,² was the same as the turta and consisted of 'whole meal.' The Beverley bakers were this time threatened with the pillory (judicium pilorie), which did not prevent our friend Roger Kedall from being fined again in 1445, 2d. for three defective symnells. The other bakers also were fined again and again. The assize was not, therefore, wholly effective. Continual fraud tempered with occasional fines was, seemingly, more profitable than honesty.

The assize of beer was taken (p. 9) by the same persons as the assize of bread, and all brewsters (brasiatrices) were to be amerced, 'at the end of the year, viz. at Michaelmas.' It is in connection with brewsters that we find what may be the earliest mention of a craft gild in Beverley. In 1864 (p. 41), it was ordered by the community that if any member of it abuse the officers 'of Brewster-gild' for their affeering, he shall pay 6s. 8d. In 1871 (p. 41) a gallon of beer was to be sold for 1½d., and no more, while malt was between 5s. and 6s. 8d. a quarter, and the measure to be sealed with the lord's mark. There is no trace in the fifteenth century Minute Book of any tasting or taking of beer by the affeerers, nor of any fines for bad beer or for selling at too high a rate. There seems, however, to be no doubt that the assize of ale was regularly maintained. We find at the end of the account roll for 1423 a list of the 'parcells which remain for the use of the community.' It begins with '1 potell, 1 quart, 1 pynte, 1 gille of peutir; 2 panyers, 1 hopir, 1 modius, 1 firthindal, 1 piece and ¼ a piece of wood; 1 gallon, 1 potell, 1 third part and 1 quart of wood for measuring ale, bought 5 years before as appears in the account roll of that year.' Oddly enough, there is no later trace of any gild of brewers, nor are any ordinances of such a gild registered in the Gild Book. The only mention of anything that looks like a gild is an order under the heading of Painters, Goldsmiths, Masons and Glaziers, in 1495, that 'all Typpyllers living in the town, unmarried, are to pay yearly for their contribution to the Alderman and Stewards for the maintenance of the light 2s.' A 'tippler' is not an uncommon name for a public-house-keeper, as in an order in 1405 (p. 15), that 'no brewster or female seller, called tipeler, permit strangers to remain after 9 p.m.' But in this connection it almost looks as if the word meant 'stippler.' The explanation of there being no real Brewsters' Gild is that brewing was, and for the most part remained, a domestic industry. The brewsters or ale-wives (brasiatrices) were women, usually married women, whose husbands had other occupations; and whether as makers or sellers of beer they had no combination and little opportunity of combining.

It was otherwise with the Bakers and the Butchers. The Orders or Ordinances of the latter art or craft have been selected for printing because they appear to be some of the earliest of all. The 'Facultie of Bocheours' when, in 1416 (p. 123), it registered its ordinances and got them approved by the Governors, claimed that they dated from 1365; and in 1365 certainly (p. 25), the Keepers or Governors had made an order as to the butchers, restricting the sale of meat to the ancient Butchers' market. But there was no assize of meat. On the contrary, it is laid down (p. 9) that butchers may not be punished before the archbishop's steward or bailiffs, except under a special commission from the king. When an order was made in 1480 regulating the order of the procession on Corpus Christi day the Butchers were placed second of the craft gilds, next after the Merchants, just before the Bakers: a recognition, no doubt, of their seniority. Their ordinances are therefore very interesting. The first one, as usual, referred to religion. On Monday before Lent, afterwards changed to Monday after Corpus Christi day (p. 123, English), they had a solemn musical Mass sung in the Greyfriars' or Franciscans' church for the souls of the brethren and sisters of the craft. On the Sunday after Corpus Christi day, which was the first Sunday after Trinity, they held their annual election of one Alderman and two Stewards (seneschalli). The penalty for refusing the former office was a pound of wax, and for refusing the latter half a pound, to the use of the craft. An order of 1468 gives an alternative payment of 6d., while the sixteenth century English version transmutes the penalty into 6s. 8d. and 3s. 4d. to be divided equally between the Governors (i.e. the town) and the faculty. The butchers were to have as many congregations (i.e. general meetings) during the year as were necessary; the penalty for absence being a pound of wax. A curious order was that if anyone went into the country without leave from the officers, or if he had leave to go to one place and went to another, he had to pay 2 lb. of wax. In 1492 (p. 127) this penalty was raised to expulsion for ever 'from broderhed and clothinge.' Its object was probably to prevent forestalling. Penalties of 40d. and 20d. for abusing the Alderman or Stewards in discharge of their duty were imposed. The entrance fee is not stated in full: 20d. was to be paid down and a tally given for the rest. In 1468 (p. 126) the entrance fee was 8s. for new members, 2s. for those who had been apprentices. In 1469 (p. 127) this was raised to 8s. 4d. and 1 lb. of wax for the craft's light, kept presumably in the Friars Minors' church. At the same time (p. 126) every butcher had to become a burgess, if he was 'of ability'; if not, he was charged 1s. a year as a contributor. A grithman, or sanctuary man, who was not allowed to be a burgess, was made to be a contributor. A servant, ('Anglice, a journeyman') had to pay 8d. a year, which his master might deduct from his wages; this was raised in 1510 to 6d. The craft livery was to be worn new for the Rogation days and kept for two years, being worn on the principal feasts throughout the year for the first year. A shilling fine was imposed for making away with it within the two years. The chief regulative ordinance was that any dispute arising between members of the craft was 'according to ancient statute' to be brought before the Alderman and settled by him, under a penalty of 8s. 4d. The Keepers or Governors (p. 28) imposed a penalty of 6s. 8d. for selling bad meat, and 40d. for putting blood or offal in the streets on Walker beck, which flowed down Walker gate. In 1367 a muzzling order was made, and any butcher whose dog was found loose was fined 40d., a quarter-mark. In 1370 a proclamation was made that butchers were to sell their own meat in their own shops, and not send it to other butchers to sell, on pain of forfeiture. It is not clear whether this was to prevent shuffling off the responsibility for bad meat, or in the interests of the Merchant Gild. At the same time the Beverley butchers and outside butchers were directed to stand at opposite ends of the market, with the Fish market between them, so that they might not mix—no doubt to prevent quarrelling. In 1416 (p. 124) gild orders were made as to Sunday trading. The Butchers were not to kill on Sundays between Easter and 1 August; nor have their shops open between 9 A.M. and noon. But from 1 August to Michaelmas there was no restriction; no doubt, because of the heat. From Michaelmas to Lent they were to have their shops shut from 10 to 12 on Sundays. In 1554 the shops were ordered to be shut every Sunday at 9 A.M., and no one was to go into the country on Sunday to buy. Heavy penalties were imposed in 1468 on butchers buying meat from a 'foreigner' coming to market on market-day.

The 'foreign' butchers were in 1490 brought under the control of the gild, and the searchers (scrutatores) of the craft searched the foreigners' stalls for bad meat as they did those of the town butchers.

In 1494 (p. 128) the Butchers' ordinances reveal the method then prevalent for the election of the alderman and stewards of the Gild, showing that what would now be called the Court of the Company had already become a very close body. The election was made by the alderman and five ex-aldermen, who chose two out of the five, from whom the brethren selected one. Not until the five were reduced to three was the body of electors filled up, and then the brethren were bound to elect one who had been a 'searcher' of the craft.

The Bakers must have been very little, if at all, behind the Butchers in forming a gild. The beginning of the Bakers' gild may perhaps be seen (p. 37) in 1366, when five bakers appeared before the twelve Keepers and allowed for themselves and their whole craft (artificio) that if any of them disobeyed the majority of the craft in things concerning the common good of the craft he should pay half a mark to the community. This was immediately followed by an order that any baker hiring a mill for any term should be fined 40s. The principle of ne sutor supra crepidam was severely enforced in the supposed interests of the community. In a similar spirit, in 1458,¹ the Hostlers or Innkeepers were ordered not to bake horse-bread but to buy it of the common bakers. The Bakers' ordinances were not codified till 1428. Their play at the Corpus Christi Play was, appropriately, the Maundy: that is, a representation of the feast at which Christ broke bread with His disciples.

Religious Objects of the Craft Gilds.

It may be noted that the three chief marks and burdens of a craft gild were religious. First came the maintenance of a gild-light, one or more wax candles (cereos or serges), or sometimes a lamp, burning before the image of the patron saint in the minster or S. Mary's; or in one or two cases, in S. Nicholas Holme church, or one of the churches of the Friars, black or grey. At this light were performed the yearly Mass for the brethren, dead or alive, and the funeral services on a deceased brother or sister.

The next and more outwardly important religious function was one not known, so far as I have seen, elsewhere than at Beverley : the custom of building a castle from which to view and take part in the great religious processions on the Rogation days.

It is in connection with these religious functions that we find the first mention, and perhaps the origin, of a gild livery ; ' clothing ' it is always called at Beverley, where the French language and French derivatives in English seem to have been much less in fashion than they were in London and the South. The first instance of it is in 1375 when (p. 31) it was agreed that none of the gild of Shoemakers (allutariorum) should wear any new clothing except of the same suit as his brethren on the day when they were assembled in their castle, against the coming of S. John of Beverley, under penalty of 20d. to the gild light and 20d. to the community. The actual word ' gild ' is used in this passage ; which is rather rare in these Beverley ordinances, the usual words being brotherhood (fraternitas) or craft (artificium or sciencia). The gild had existed previously, for in 1364 an order had been made as to the Cobblers' market (foro sutorum) that no shoemaker should sell shoes outside his own house, except in the old Cobblers' market. The Shoemakers then agreed that if any of them broke any order contained in their Domesday Roll he should be fined. Their orders were enrolled in the Gild Book (f. 67) and approved by the Keepers in 1394. One of the first of them was that ' all the brethren be present at the making and covering of the castle, and also be in it sitting or standing at the time when the shrine of S. John of Beverley is carried to the bridge called the Cross bridge.' The custom is more fully set out in the Tanners' Orders of 1416, ' that the crafte of Tanners shall raise up one castle of tree (ligneum) on Monday in Rogation week,' to sit there ' at the hour of prime and the time of processions, in clothing all of one suit,' and also ' shall ride at afternoon in the same suit as other crafts do after their old ancient and laudable custom.' The shrine was carried from the Minster to S. Mary's Church, then a chapel (p. 99) appendant to the Minster, the litany being sung in the procession. After it had passed, there was a dinner (commessionem), and on the return-journey of the shrine in the afternoon, the gildsmen left their castles, mounted their horses and followed the procession on horseback. On Tuesday the shrine was carried to the other dependent chapel, S. Nicholas Holme, at the other side of the town, when the crafts who dwelt in that part of the town also had their castles and followed the procession. When in 1493 (p. 99) the Drapers separated from the Merchants and Mercers and organised themselves as a separate craft, their first order ran: 'That there shall be of the Drapers a brotherhood for the maintenance of a wooden castle . . . next the castle of the Mercers' under fine of 40s. to the community. The erection of a castle was the outward and visible sign of the establishment of a new gild.

In later times the procession and play on Corpus Christi Day, the Thursday after Trinity Sunday, in honour of the Blessed Sacrament, to emphasise the doctrine of the Real Presence, became even more important in gild life than the castle on Rogation days. The Gild of Corpus Christi, consisting primarily of priests, was founded at Beverley between 1330 and 1350 to regulate the procession. Its ordinances have been printed.¹ The place of the gilds in the procession, and the presentation of an act or scene in the Corpus Christi play which followed, became matters of the highest importance. The Corpus Christi play is first mentioned, appropriately enough, à propos of the Tailors, in 1377 (p. 44), when 'it was agreed in the Gild Hall that all tailors should appear at the account of the expenses of the pageant of the Corpus Christi play, and on the castle and feast on Monday in Rogation days.' The few who could not afford the livery were to pay to the castle only. Between 1390 and 1457 the longest orders in our books concern the play, and it is in connection with it that we get the somewhat amazing lists of the large number of crafts in Beverley. No less than thirty-eight are mentioned in the order of 1390 directing that each should have its plays and stages ready every Corpus Christi day, after the 'ancient custom,' and a list of thirty-seven with their respective plays is given on the fly-leaf of the Great Gild Book somewhere about 1510.² So important was it deemed for the honour of the town that the play should be duly performed that it was found necessary for the 'worthier sort' 'who had not liveries as others of the rest of the crafts' to get up a special play or rather scene. The name of the play is generally put among the first items of the gild orders. Thus the Barbers (p. 109), whose candles burnt before S. John the Baptist's image in S. Mary's church, agreed that their play should be 'the said S. John baptizing Christ in the Jordan'; while the Drapers (p. 99) were to perform 'every year when the community consent on S. Mark's day that the play shall be played' 'Demyng Pylate' or Pilate on the judgment seat. The

² Beverlac, p. 272. This list is full of misreadings. A correcter version will be found in a paper by me on 'Some English Plays and Players, 1220-1548' in a forthcoming volume, in honour of Dr. Furnivall's 75th birthday, entitled An English Miscellany (Clarendon Press, 1900).

obligation was enforced, for the Smiths were duly fined by the Keepers in 1392 (p. 36) for not performing their play of the Ascension. Not less careful were the Governors of the Corpus Christi procession, out of which the play had originally sprung. The order of precedence of the various religious and craft gilds was solemnly settled in 1431 (p. 35). The Corpus Christi Gild came first; then the Gilds of S. Mary and of S. John of Beverley; next came the Aldermen and Stewards only of twenty craft gilds arranged probably in order of date, while five more religious gilds brought up the rear. Another order, however, made in 1498 (p. 62), while it followed the old order for the first seven gilds, Merchants, Drapers, Butchers, Bakers, Wrights or Carpenters, Smiths and Tailors, then deviated altogether, the Tilers, who were last in the former order, coming next, while several trades dropped out and were replaced by others. In the order of consent to the erection of the Drapers as a separate gild, signed by representatives of existing gilds, there is a similar divergence after the first six.

Numbers of the Craft Gilds.

It would be interesting to know how many individuals supported the burdens of these craft gilds. The materials for forming an opinion are too scanty and scattered. In an agreement for the preservation of the liberty of the town in 1456 (p. 50), signed by the representatives of nineteen gilds, there were 24 watermen, 22 websters, 21 tailors, 19 shoemakers, 18 butchers, 17 tanners, 13 each of the glovers, smiths, and bakers, while there were only 3 saddlers. But these cannot represent the full strength of the gilds, as in 1414, when the Tailors had a gathering in the garden of the Friars Preachers,¹ there were 89 masters and 19 journeymen present. As the question then at issue was one between the masters and 'servants, servers or journeymen,' this was no doubt a full muster. As the tailors were very numerous, we may perhaps conclude that sixty would represent the high-water mark in numbers of any gild but the Merchants'.² Ten Barbers are mentioned as consenting to their orders of 1414 (p. 111) and twelve to those of 1416 (p. 112). Such gilds as the Goldsmiths, whose numbers had to be eked out in 1458 with painters and glaziers (the common bond being apparently church decoration), to play the 'Three Kings of Colone;' or the Braziers, who, in 1424,³ swept in cutlers, furbishours, plumbers, card-makers, tinklers, bollers, and, in 1478, the pewterers and pinners, to contribute to their play of the Crucifixion; could not have been more than a dozen in number at the outside. The orders of the Millers, in 1491, were made on the petition of seven millers.

Protective Objects of the Craft Gilds.

Though the prominent purport of the craft gilds was religious and social, it cannot be doubted that the paramount purpose was protection. The townsmen and the craftsmen both wanted protection: the former wanted it as consumers against fraudulent dealing and false work; the latter wanted it as producers, against the unfair competition of such fraud and falsity. In bread and ale the public through the assize of bread and ale could protect itself. But in weaving and fulling, in dyeing and tanning, only experts could detect fraud, and the general public had to rely on the organisation of the trade itself. The assize of cloth and leather, so to speak, had to be taken through the searchers of the cloth and leather trades, and the community delegated its powers to them for the purpose. It was not in human nature that the trades thus organised and armed with coercive powers should not exercise their powers to abate fair competition as well as unfair competition. In the earlier orders of the gilds we find only indirect traces of this. The great object was not to limit the number of members so much as to make as many as possible come in and contribute to the gild expenses. Thus in 1492 (p. 75) the Tailors had tried to make any drapers who made or sold hose become members or contributors to the Tailors' gild. So in 1416 the Barbers (p. 111) had insisted that all medical men, surgeons, physicians and dentists (or tooth-drawers as they called them (p. 113), the only idea of dentistry being the extraction of the offending member), on the one hand, and all makers and sellers of wax candles, on the other, should become members or contributors to the craft. To them in 1498 (p. 113) were added blood-letters and image-makers. That these orders for inclusion had also an exclusive side is plain from the record of the settlement of the dispute in 1494 between the Drapers and Tailors. The Drapers, a name which meant retail cloth-sellers, managed to insist that tailors who bought and sold cloth to the value of four marks a year should become contributors to them; and on the other hand the Tailors gained that drapers who made any clothes besides hose should become contributors to them. Similar disputes with like compromises arose between tanners and shoemakers (p. 81),¹ and between carpenters on the one side and bowyers, fletchers and coopers on the other. In this last dispute, in 1514,² it was settled by the Governors that the carpenters should withdraw their suit at London, the others withdrawing their suit at Beverley, and that the carpenters should be 'free to occupy carving, embossing, rabbiting, joining and ceiling [seeling],' without any contribution, but those who made 'copburds, counters, chests, awmbres or pressurs' should contribute to the 'Bowers,' their allies. The principle was (f. 77) that the carpenters might make anything that was 'parcel of a house.'

When, on the abolition of 'superstitious uses,' the tapers and torches and the processions and plays had been abandoned, the gilds frankly set themselves to making orders to limit the trade. The upsets, or payment for setting up a trade, were increased (pp. 83, 108), the term of apprenticeship was lengthened (p. 92) and the taking of apprentices and the number of them restricted (p. 93), and instead of the path of admission to burgess-ship lying through the gilds, nobody was allowed to exercise a trade unless he became a burgess.

But the decay of institutions which have once been flourishing, till they die of inanition or are swept out of existence as anachronous obstructions, is not a pleasant subject. There is a later Gild Book at Beverley, which tells a considerable portion of that story. It is pleasanter to leave the greater and the lesser corporations of the town when they were still useful, and apparently taking on a new lease of life and power in the stir of the reformation of religion.

It remains only to return thanks to the Corporation and Town Clerk (Mr. J. Willis Mills) of Beverley for their permission to study at home and publish these records, and to Mr. John Bilson, architect and antiquary, of Hull, for supervising the translation of local names.

It is almost superfluous to acknowledge the care, courtesy, and learning brought to bear by Mr. F. W. Maitland in the execution of his task as general editor. Are they not known unto all men?

ARTHUR F. LEACH.

¹ In 13 Richard II. (1389-90), c. 12, the order between shoemakers and tanners was made a statute of the realm, the reason given being that shoemakers sold leather falsely tanned and as dear as they pleased.

BEVERLEY TOWN DOCUMENTS.

THE GREAT CHARTER OF THE COMMUNITY.

To all Christ's faithful people to whom this present deed shall come Richard of Louth, John Tirwhitt, son of Adam Tirwhitt, Adam Coppandale, son of William Coppandale, sen., Peter Lombard, William of Lockington, Peter of Stainton, John Spicer, Thomas Jervis, Alexander Crass, Robert of Beeford, Thomas of Scruton, John of Wragby, chosen by the common consent and assent of the community of the town of Beverley to keep the town aforesaid and the customs and statutes of the same town for the present year viz. from S. Mark's day, A.D. 1159, to the same day a year hence Everlasting Health in the Lord.

Know ye that we in our Gild Hall of Beverley, from of old called the Hanshouse, in the presence of the whole community of the same town have inspected and recited certain statutes and customs used and approved from time immemorial, to the effect following, viz. :

That every year on S. Mark's day the twelve elected to keep the town for the year past shall out of the better and sufficient men of the said community in the Gild Hall aforesaid, the whole community being there with notice beforehand, name eighteen, excluding those who have been keepers of the said town in the three years past before the nomination aforesaid ; and the community shall elect twelve out of the aforesaid eighteen to keep the town for the year to come.

These twelve elected and sworn, or seven of them if all cannot be present, shall have full power to levy the farms, rents, and ancient assessments in the same town, and keep and maintain the ancient customs and statutes, and chastise and punish in their discretion those who rebel against or contravene them : and when necessary to ordain and make new orders and statutes with the consent of the community ordinare et constituere; et ad levandum per pixides actenus usitatas tales prestaciones et assessas antiquitus in villa predicta, videlicet;

For small boats and barges, and little ketches, there may be taken at the discretion of the keepers and collectors according to the seasons or season of the year when they come to sell and collect the arrears of the premises.

We will also and grant that wherever clothes, wool, or other the goods aforesaid are bought in the town of Beverley or outside by any of our co-burgesses or merchants that the assessment before mentioned may be levied thereon in manner aforesaid.

And those statutes and orders of the aforesaid twelve elected we for us our heirs and successors grant approve and ratify to endure for all time, so that if any who now is or shall for the time being be of our community order or attempt anything against the said statutes he shall give the community aforesaid £10 to be levied by distraint of the twelve then elected, and also shall lose all freedom of a burges in the town aforesaid.

And if any one elected by the nomination aforesaid to the keepership of the said town by the community aforesaid refuse his office, then he shall be bound to pay to the said community 40s. to be levied by distress by the same community or the keepers of the said community for the time being.

And if any of the twelve elected do not come to the Common Hall for the business of the community having notice from the common serjeant of the town aforesaid, as often as he absents himself without reasonable cause, he shall pay to the community aforesaid 12d. ; and every other burges of the town aforesaid thus having notice and not coming, shall pay to the community aforesaid 6d. each time, to be levied by distraint in form aforesaid.

And if the said twelve elected think it expedient that rates should be levied in the said town, the aforesaid twelve men shall cause notice to be given to all the burgesses of the town aforesaid to be on a certain day at the Common Hall so that the rates may be imposed by the assent of the whole community if all come, and that by poundage ; and if they do not come, or come and will not consent to the rates aforesaid, then the aforesaid twelve may impose rates in the pound, and levy them on their oath as seems best.

Also the said twelve so elected and sworn, or seven of them, shall have special power of taking all and singular profits accruing to the community, of receiving rents, of leasing and appraising the

Et quicquid dicti duodecim vel septem eorum jam electi, per sacramentum suum, pro utilitate communitatis predictæ se dixerint expendisse et exposuisse, per duodecim eligendos pro anno futuro, sine contradiccione allocabitur.

Preterea si predicti xij, aut aliquis eorum, vel clericus aut serviens eorum sint implacitati, vel aliquis eorum sit implacitatus pro officio seu aliquo alio facto communitatis, expense eorum de communitate in omnibus restaurentur.

Et si contingat quod in districcione xij hominum vel septem eorum, seu servientis dicte communitatis, aliquis de communitate, tam de predictis xij hominibus quam de ceteris burgensibus, rebellis inventus fuerit aut rescussum fecerit, quod incontinenti sine remedio vjs. viijd. solvat communitati predictæ. Et similiter liceat predictis xij, vel septem eorum, ipsum sic inventum rebellem de die in diem per omnia bona et catalla sua, ubicumque fuerint sic inventa, distringere, districciones facere fugare asportare et detinere, quousque de omnibus arreragiis, demandis et proficuis ad communitatem pertinentibus et de transgressionibus predictis, communitati predictæ plenarie satisfecerit. Et si aliquis de communitate predicta in premissis nullo modo justificari possit, predicti duodecim vel septem eorum premuniri facient omnes burgenses ville predictæ, videlicet ad certum diem, ad communem aulam in auxilium predictorum xij hominum vel septem eorum ad ipsum sic inventum rebellem et contrarium justificandum, et ulterius de talibus rebellis [sic] et contrariis remedium imponere et ordinare quocienscumque et quandocumque necesse fuerit pro utilitate communitatis predictæ.

Item, ordinatum est et statutum per communitatem ville predictæ, quod nullus de communitate predicta ponat seu ponere faciat fimum seu sterquilinum in altis stratis, nec in aliis viis publicis ville predictæ ubi carecte fugantur vel possint fugari. Et si quis de communitate predicta contra hanc ordinacionem facere presumpserit, nisi ad minus

And whatever the said twelve, or seven of them, now elected shall say by their oath that they have expended and laid out for the use of the community aforesaid, shall be allowed by the twelve to be elected for the next year, without challenge.

Moreover, if the said twelve, or any of them, or their clerk or serjeant, be impleaded, or any of them be impleaded, for doing their office or other thing for the community, their expenses in all respects shall be reimbursed to them by the community.

And if in any distraint by the twelve men, or seven of them, or the serjeant of the community, any of the community, whether of the aforesaid twelve or of the rest of the burgesses, shall be found rebellious or shall make a rescue, he shall forthwith without redress pay 6s. 8d. to the community aforesaid. And likewise it shall be lawful for the said twelve, or seven of them, to distrain or cause to be distrained him so found rebellious day by day by all his goods and chattels wheresoever they may be found, to drive, carry away, and keep the same, until he shall have made full satisfaction to the community of all arrears, demands, and profits belonging to the community and for his trespasses aforesaid. And if justice cannot be done on any of the community in the premises, the said twelve or seven of them shall cause notice to be given to all the burgesses of the town aforesaid for a certain day at the common hall to help the said twelve men or seven of them to do justice on him so found rebellious and resisting them, and to take further order for such rebels so resisting as often as shall be necessary for the benefit of the community aforesaid.

Also it was ordered and decreed by the community of the town aforesaid that none of the community aforesaid put or cause to be put refuse or muck-heaps in the high streets or other public roads of the town aforesaid where carts are driven or may be driven; and any of the community aforesaid offending against this order, unless it be

16 April.

Edwardus, Dei gracia, Rex Anglie, Dominus Hibernie et² Aquitanie, civibus, ballivis et fidelibus suis ad quos presentes littere pervenerint Salutem.

Sciatis quod cum quidam homines de diversis latrociniis et oppressionibus apud Beverlacum indictati, et quidam eorundem inde convicti fuissent, et Venerabili patri Archiepiscopo Eboracensi juxta privilegium clericale liberati in prisiona, prout moris est, detinendi, At quam plures homines ipsorum judicatorum parentes alligati et amici omnibus hominibus communitatis ville Beverlaci occasione hujusmodi indictamentorum de corporibus suis et de incendio domorum suarum graviter comminantur, et eos ad mala que poterunt eis inferenda de die ac nocte insidiantur;

Nos volentes securitati dictorum hominum dicte communitatis providere, de avisamento consilii nostri suscepimus ipsos in protectionem et defensionem nostras speciales, omnibus et singulis inhibentes, ne quis sub forisfactura omnium que nobis forisfacere poterit, prefatis hominibus dicte communitatis occasionibus premissis dampnum seu impedimentum aliquod inferat aut gravamen; Et ideo vobis mandamus quod ipsos homines dicte communitatis manuteneatis protegatis et defendatis, Non inferentes eis, vel, quantum in vobis est, ab aliis inferri permittentes, injuriam, molestiam seu gravamen. Et siquid eis forisfactum vel injuriatum fuerit, id eis sine dilacione emendari et debite reformari faciatis.

PROTECTION FOR THE MEN OF THE TOWN OF BEVERLEY.

Edward by the grace of God King of England, Lord of Ireland and Aquitaine, to his citizens, bailiffs and faithful servants to whom these present letters shall come Greeting.

Know ye that whereas certain men were indicted for divers robberies and oppressions at Beverley, and some of them were convicted and in accordance with clerical privilege delivered to the venerable father the Archbishop of York to be kept in prison, as is usual ; but many men, parents, kindred and friends of the same accused threaten all the men of the community of the town of Beverley by reason of these indictments, with bodily violence and burning of their houses, and lie in wait by day and night to do all the evil that they can to them ;

We wishing to provide for the safety of the said men of the said community by the advice of our council have taken them into our special protection and defence commanding all and singular that none under forfeiture of all which he can forfeit to us, inflict any damage loss or grievance on the aforesaid men of the said community by reason of the premisses, and therefore we command you to maintain, protect and defend the men of the said community, not bringing on them or as much as in you lies allowing others to bring on them any injury, trouble or grievance ; and if any forfeiture or injury has been done to them, causing amends to be made to them without delay and due reparation made.

In witness whereof we have made these our letters patent to last at our pleasure.

Edwardus Dei gracia Rex Anglie, dominus Hibernie et Acquitanie, vice-comitibus Eboraci Salutem.

Cum secundum consuetudinem in villa de Beverlaco ex antiquo optentam, ministri vice comitum denarios de viridi cera ad nos infra villam predictam pertinentes levare et recipere non debeant, antequam warantum suum de hujusmodi denariis ad opus nostrum levandis, ballivis ville predictæ, aut illis de quibus hujusmodi denarii levandi fuerint, ostendant;

Ac jam ex gravi querela quorundam hominum ville predictæ accepimus, quod quidam ministri tui hujusmodi denarios in villa predicta levant et recipiunt, et warantum suum inde ostendere negligunt, quam plures denarios sub colore denariorum nostrorum predictorum a diversis hominibus eiusdem ville, absque causa rationabili, extorquendo in nostri scandalum et jacturam, et diversorum hominum ville predictæ grave dampnum, et contra consuetudinem predictam; Unde non immerito conturbamur et move-mur; super quo nobis est supplicatum de remedio facere providere;

Nos in hac parte fieri volentes quod est justum, tibi precipimus sub incumbenti periculo injungentes quod omnes hujusmodi ministros tuos ex parte nostra moneas et eis districte injungas, quod hujusmodi denarios in villa predicta ab aliquibus hominibus, antequam sufficiens warantum in forma predicta manifeste ostendant, non levant nec recipiant contra consuetudinem predictam, ne clamor ad nos inde proveniat iteratus, propter quod materiam habeamus ad te graviter capiendi.

COMMISSION OF GREEN WAX.

Edward by the grace of God King of England, Lord of Ireland and Aquitaine, to the Sheriffs of York, Greeting.

Whereas according to the custom which has obtained in the town of Beverley from of old, the officers of the Sheriffs ought not to levy and receive money from the green wax belonging to us in the town aforesaid, before showing their warrant for such monies to the bailiffs of the town aforesaid or those from whom such monies are to be levied ;

But now we learn from the grievous complaint of certain men of the town aforesaid, that some of your officers levy and take such monies in the town aforesaid, and neglect to show their warrant for the same, extorting much monies under colour of our monies aforesaid from divers men of the town aforesaid without reasonable cause, to the scandal and loss of us, and the heavy damage of divers men of the town aforesaid, and contrary to the custom aforesaid. Wherefore we are not unreasonably disturbed and moved, and whereon prayer has been made to us to provide a remedy ;

We wishing to do in this behalf what is just, enjoin and command you at your peril, that you warn all such officers of yours on our behalf, and strictly enjoin them not to levy or take, contrary to the aforesaid custom, such monies in the town aforesaid from any men, before they have shown a sufficient warrant in form aforesaid, and to take care that no complaint thereof reach us a second time, for which we may have cause to deal grievously with you.

CHARTER FOR THE ELECTION OF THE TWELVE KEEPERS OF THE TOWN OF BEVERLEY.

Richard by the grace of God &c. To all and singular the good men and burgesses of the town of Beverley Greeting.

Whereas through lack of good governance oftentimes between the inhabitants and commons of cities and towns excesses are committed, evils and scandals are begotten, and various kinds of dangers arise, and a life of peace is evilly hindered, and all such excesses, evils and dangers have as is sufficiently notorious been et pericula in villa de Beverlaco ob defectum maxime boni regiminis prout satis erat notorium, noscuntur hiis diebus plus solito accidisse. Consuevit enim villa illa ex antiqua et approbata consuetudine inibi per quinquaginta annos inconcusse usitata, per xij probos homines ville illius, in festo Sancti Marci Evangeliste de communi assensu burgensium dicte ville apud Gildeshallam ejusdem annuatim ad hoc electos, regi et pacifice gubernari; set consuetudine illa inter vos ex arrupto mutata, loco dictorum xij proborum hominum, unum Aldermannum et duos camerarios ad regimen et gubernacionem ville illius infra annum presentem noviter prefecistis et ordinastis, et hujusmodi ordinacionem, que in villa predicta ante predictos quinquaginta annos vel antea, nisi bis vel rarius, visa non fuit, et pro meliore regimine ville predictae, de communi assensu burgensium dicte ville extitit, tunc cassata, tenere et continuare intendetis, licet gubernacio dictorum xij hominum in multo prevaleat ad bonum regimen dicte ville, que quidem ordinacio, si continuetur, in maximam desolacionem ville illius et disposicionem burgensium ejusdem cederet manifeste, ut accepimus;

Nos relevacionem ville predictae ac quietam et pacificam conversacionem ibidem, ob specialem devocionem quam [habemus] ad gloriosum Christi confessorem Beatum Iohannem, cuius corpus in Monasterio dicte ville est translatum, amplius cupientes volentesque pro inde pro meliori regimine dicte ville et pro defectibus hujusmodi regiminis ibidem emendandis, prospicere graciose

Vobis et cuilibet vestrum districcius quo possumus et sub fide et ligeancia quibus nobis tenemini injungimus et mandamus, quod unanimi assensu in festo Sancti Marci Evangeliste proximo futuro apud Gildeshallam vestram predictam pacifice, prout moris est, conveniatis et premissis omnibus in presencia vestra lectis et intellectis, et matura deliberacione ponderatis, sessantibus rixarum et dissencionum materiis quibuscumque, talia regimen, regulam et gubernacionem in villa predicta, per que eadem villa et populus noster ibidem melius et quietius regi et gubernari et pax nostra ibidem custodiri, et amicitia inter vos perfeccius teneri poterunt, pro anno presenti, et sic de anno in annum, ponatis et debite ordinetis, et ad hoc diligenter et amicabiliter adhibeatis invicem vices vestras prout melius et ordinacius ante hec tempora in villa predicta fieri consuevit, et pro bono pacis et quietis inter vos firmiter faciendo quoscumque rebelles et contradicentes, seu eciam dissencionum vel rixarum inceptores motores et actores ac eorum fautores, si qui fuerint in hac parte, viis et modis quibus convenit compescentes, et de suis maliciis debite restringetis.

more than usually common in these days in the town of Beverley through lack above all of good governance. For that town, in accordance with ancient and approved custom used there undisturbed for fifty years, has been accustomed to be peacefully ruled and governed by the twelve good men of that town elected for that purpose on S. Mark's day with the common assent of the burgesses of the said town at the Gild Hall of the same; but by a sudden change of that custom, in place of the said twelve good men, you have in the present year newly appointed and ordained an alderman and two chamberlains, and this order, which has not been seen in the town aforesaid for fifty years or more, except twice or less, and for the better government of the town aforesaid by the common assent of the burgesses of the said town was then abolished, you intend to maintain and to continue, although the government of the said twelve men is far better for the good rule of the said town; and this order, if continued, will clearly lead, as we are informed, to the wasting of the said town and the displacement of the burgesses of the same;

We greatly desiring the relief of the town aforesaid and quiet and peaceful life there, for the special devotion which we bear to the glorious confessor of Christ the Blessed John of Beverley, whose body lies translated in the minster of the said town, and wishing therefore to make provision for the better management of the said town and to amend the defects in its management, Enjoin and command you and every of you as straitly as we can and on the faith and allegiance by which you are bound to us, that with one assent ye peacefully come together as usual on S. Mark's day next at your Gild Hall aforesaid, and after the premisses have been read before you and mastered, and after due deliberation, putting aside all matter of quarrel and discussion, lay down and duly order such management rule and government in the town aforesaid, whereby the same town and our people there may be best and most quietly ordered and governed, and our peace there kept, and friendship be best maintained among you, for the present year and so from year to year; and for this end carefully and in friendly fashion use yourselves one towards another, as has been best and in most orderly wise heretofore used in the town aforesaid; and for the firm establishment of peace and quiet among you, putting down all rebels and opponents or the instigators, movers, and authors of dissensions and quarrels and their adherents, if there are any, in all convenient ways, and duly restraining them from their malice.

Et hoc sicut nos et honorem nostrum diligitis, et gravem indignacionem nostram ac perpetuam forisfacturam omnium libertatum vestrarum evitare volueritis nullatenus omittatis.¹

ANCIENT CUSTOMS AND LIBERTIES OF THE TOWN OF BEVERLEY.²

Hee sunt consuetudines et libertates ville Beverlaci a tempore quo non extat memoria usitate et approbate per burgenses ejusdem ville, ut patet per vetus Registrarium in magno papiro registratum.

De assisa panis.

In primis quod duodecim [custodes] ville Beverlaci [presentent sex burgenses³] quolibet anno, qui ad custodiendum villam predictam electi sunt, ad proximam Curiam Archiepiscopi post festum Sancti Michaelis in plena Curia apud Beverlacum presentent sex burgenses ejusdem ville ad custodiendum assisam panis et cervisie pro illo anno. Qui quidem sex burgenses jurabunt quod fideliter custodient assisam predictam. Ed quandocunque sibi viderint necesse et oportunum capient panes, qui panes per ballivos in presencia sex burgensium ponderentur, et ibi secundum ponderacionem et qualitatem panium et eorum discrecionem defectus adjudicentur et per eorum sacramentum delinquentes amercientur et castigentur, et amerciamenta, si que fuerint, per eos affirentur, et quod amerciamenta predicta per indenturas inter predictos sex burgenses et ballivos factas ballivis predictis liberentur. Exceptis tamen festis nundinarum ville predictae, videlicet, Sancti Johannis in [h]yeme, Ascensionis Domini, Nativitatis Sancti Johannis Baptiste et per octo dies sequentes, et exceptis inter festum Sancti Petri ad Vincula et festum Sancti Michaelis; quibus

¹ This writ was rather a brutum fulmen, as the third earliest extant account of the town of Beverley, that for 1386 (the two earlier ones being for 1344 and 1366 respectively), is rendered by Thomas Gervays, Alderman, and John Trippoks and John of Aton, chamberlains. As they account for a balance received from John of Ake, alderman and chamberlain for the year before, it is clear that the ancient method of government was resorted to again at least in those two years. It is noticeable that the year of Richard II.'s writ is that of Wat Tyler's rebellion. By the fourth extant account, that for 1405, and in subsequent accounts the government by twelve Keepers was firmly established.

² Great Gild Book, f. 5. This, which should be folio 6, is really the first page in the book, five fly-leaves in front of it having been filled with later matter. The initial letters and headings are rubricated. It was written in 1408.

³ These words are evidently inserted here by mistake. They are not in the copy of these customs in the existing Paper Register, which is not 'the old Paper Register' referred to in the text, but a later (Henry VI.) and a smaller book.

And this as ye love us and our honour, and wish to avoid our heavy displeasure and perpetual forfeiture of all your liberties by no means omit.

ANCIENT CUSTOMS AND LIBERTIES OF THE TOWN OF BEVERLEY

These are the customs and liberties of the town of Beverley, from time immemorial used and approved by the burgesses of the same town, as appears by the old Register registered on large paper.

Of the assize of bread.

First, that every year the twelve keepers of the town of Beverley, who are elected to keep the town aforesaid, at the next court of the Archbishop after Michaelmas, in full court present six burgesses of the same town to keep the assize of bread and beer for that year. Which six burgesses shall swear faithfully to keep the assize aforesaid. And whenever they shall see needful and fit they shall take loaves; which loaves shall be weighed by the Bailiffs in the presence of the six burgesses, and there, after the weight and quality of the loaves and their discretion, defaults shall be adjudged, and by their oaths delinquents be amerced and punished, and the amercements, if there be any, be assessed by them, and the amercements aforesaid be delivered to the bailiffs aforesaid on indentures made between the aforesaid six burgesses and the bailiffs. Except on the three feasts of the fairs of the town aforesaid, viz. S. John in winter (27 December), Ascension Day, the Nativity of S. John the Baptist (24 June) and for eight days following; and between S. Peter ad Vincula (1 August) temporibus nulla assisa fiat, dum tamen aliis temporibus anni assisa custodiatur in forma predicta.

De assisa cervisie.

Et quoad assisam cervisie predicti sex jurati facient assisam cervisie, quolibet tempore anni quod viderint necesse, et in fine anni, videlicet ad festum Sancti Michaelis, amercient omnes braciatrices contra assisam delinquentes, et amerciamenta predicta per eosdem sex juratos affirentur, et eadem amerciamenta affirata ballivis Archiepiscopi per indenturas liberentur, et per ballivos leventur; exceptis tamen quod nulla assisa cervisie fiat temporibus prenotatis, et quod ballivi Archiepiscopi alio modo quam, ut supradictum est, nullo modo se intromittant.

Ordinacio pro carnificibus.

Item quod carnifices non puniantur coram seneschallo Archiepiscopi, seu ballivis suis, sine speciali precepto domini Regis et commissione.

Ordinacio contra piscatores et forestallarios.

Item quod nullus piscator Burgensis puniatur pro quocumque defectu, nisi per amerciamenta; et hoc quando fuerit convictus per xii burgenses juratos, et quod amerciamenta illa affirentur nisi in plena Curia Domini Archiepiscopi, et hoc per sacramentum burgensium ejusdem ville ad hoc juratorum. Excepto quod, si aliquis legitimo modo per xij juratos fuerit convictus forstallarius, ubi per statutum Domini Regis adjudicatur forstallarius, quod tunc ille vel illa sic convictus vel convicta, puniatur secundum legem terre et secundum qualitatem et quantitatem delicti. Et quod in qualibet inquisitione capienda per Seneschallum domini ad inquirendum de forstallariis exprimatur juratoribus expresse per Seneschallum, vel ballivum, qui sint forestallarii et qui non.

Quomodo burgenses erunt citati.

Item quod nullus burgensis citetur nisi in domo propria, et hoc per ballivum virgam ferentem et juratum. Et in placito¹ terre quod nullus burgensis citetur nisi per ambos ballivos et in domo propria, sicut antiquitus usum est.

Item quod nullus burgensis amercietur pro sterquiliniis.

and Michaelmas; at which times no assize may be, but at other times of the year the assize shall be kept in form aforesaid.

Of the assize of beer.

And as to the assize of beer, the aforesaid six sworn burgesses shall make an assize of beer at any time of the year they may see need, and at the end of the year, viz. at Michaelmas, they may fine all brewsters offending against the assize. And the amercements aforesaid shall be assessed by the same six jurors, and the same amercements when assessed delivered to the Archbishop's bailiffs by indentures and be levied by the bailiffs. But no assize of beer may be taken at the times before mentioned, and the Archbishop's bailiffs may not meddle in any other way than as above said.

Order for butchers.

Also, that butchers may not be punished before the Archbishop's steward or bailiffs, except by the special order and commission of the lord King.

Order against fishermen and forestallers.

Also, that no fisherman being a burgess be punished for any fault except by amercement; and that [only] when he has been convicted by the twelve sworn burgesses; and their amercements only to be assessed in the full court of the Archbishop, and that by the order of burgesses of the same town sworn for the purpose. Save that if any have been lawfully convicted by the twelve jurors as a forestaller within the meaning of the statute of the realm, then he or she so convicted may be punished according to the law of the land and the measure of the offence; and that in every inquiry held by the lord's steward as to forestallers, the steward or bailiff shall explain in set terms to the jurors what constitutes a forestaller and what not.

How burgesses should be summoned.

Also, that no burgess be summoned except in his own house and that by a sworn bailiff carrying a rod. And that in plea of land no burgess be summoned except by both bailiffs and in his own house, according to ancient custom. Also, no burgess to be amerced for dung-heaps.

Ordinacio extractum levandi.

Item quod nullus extractus fiat ad levandum amerciamenta neque fines nisi sub sigillo ballivi, et quod leventur per unum ballivum juratum.

De attachiamento burgensium.

Item quod nullus burgensis attachietur pro aliqua transgressione pro affray del pees, nisi transgressio fiat in presencia ballivi, et conquerens velit prosequi adversus adversarium, et tunc quod delinquens inveniat plegios ad respondendum ad leges. Et si pars conquerens non velit prosequi quod tunc defendens ad sectam domini, sive sit burgensis sive extraneus, eat quietus.

De arainamento burgensium.

Item quod nullus burgensis arainietur¹ per nullam presentacionem ballivi neque constabularii neque alicujus alterius, nisi per presentacionem duodecim hominum, sine speciali precepto domini Regis.

De forisfactura tenentis burgensis.

Item si aliquis tenens burgensis ville forisfaciat, et ballivi domini catalla felonum seisierint, quod primo satisfaciet burgensi de redditu suo si quis aretro fuit.

De lege vadiata Curie Archiepiscopi.

Item quando aliquis in Curia Archiepiscopi ad sectam partis faciat legem per quod consideratum sit quod pars inde eat quieta, quod ballivi Archiepiscopi, a parte defendentis sic quieti nichil capiant vel exigant; ubi ante hec tempora per extorsionem aliqui ballivi ceperunt duodecim denarios contra leges.

De natis burgensis.

Item statutum est et ordinatum pro perpetuo per communitatem ville Beverlaci, quod nullus qui natus est antequam pater geniti sit burgensis effectus, gaudebit privilegiis burgensium; ut sic; homo advena vel indigena factus est burgensis, qui habet liberos genitos et natos antequam effectus sit burgensis, illi liberi non erunt burgenses neque communicarii.

Order as to levying estreat.

Also, that no estreat be made to levy amercements or fines except under the bailiff's seal, and by a sworn bailiff.

Of attachment of a burgess.

Also, that no burgess be attached for any trespass for breach of the peace, unless the trespass be in presence of the bailiff and the plaintiff wish to prosecute, and then the offender to find sureties to answer to the law. And if the plaintiff do not wish to prosecute, that then the defendant, whether burgess or stranger, go quit as to suit of the lord.

Of the arraignment of a burgess.

Also, that no burgess be arraigned on the presentment of bailiff or constable or anyone else except on the presentment of twelve men, except by the special command of the lord King.

Of the forfeiture of the tenant of a burgess.

Also, if a tenant of a burgess of the town commit a forfeiture, and the lord's bailiffs seize felons' goods, that the burgess be first paid his rent if it is in arrear.

Of wager of law in the archbishop's court.

Also, when anyone makes his law in the Archbishop's court at the suit of a party, and it is considered that he be acquitted, the Archbishop's bailiffs are to take nothing from the defendant so acquitted; whereas heretofore by extortion some bailiffs have unlawfully taken 12d.

Of a burgess's sons.

Also, it is decreed and ordered for ever by the community of the town of Beverley, that no one, born before his father is made a burgess, shall enjoy the privileges of burgesses; as thus, a stranger or a native is made a burgess, having sons begotten and born before he is made a burgess, those children shall not be burgesses or members of the community.

De liberis concubinarum.

Item homo burgensis qui tenet concubinam et generat ex ea proles extra matrimonium, illi proles non erunt burgenses neque communicarii, dato quod pater eorum postmodum nubat matrem dictorum liberorum.

De liberis in adulterio procreatis.

Item statutum est et ordinatum quod si homo maritatus et burgensis generat liberos in adulterio, illi liberi non erunt burgenses neque communicarii, nisi faciant introitum suum in gilda aula coram gubernatoribus et communitate.

Modus eleccionis xij Custodum ville Beverlaci.

6 May.

Cum dudum ordinatum et statutum fuerit per communitatem ville Beverlaci super eleccione duodecim custodum ville Beverlaci, quod hic qui denominatus et electus fuerit custos ville Beverlaci et officium suum refutaverit, quod solvat communitati xls. ; sed quia ad plenum ordinatum non fuerat et statutum utrum is qui renuens dictum officium et solverit penam predictam erit quietus et exoneratus de dicto officio pro duobus annis tunc proximis sequentibus, vel in sequenti anno iterum ad dictum officium eligeretur ;

Idcirco die Veneris, sexto die Maii Anno domini millesimo cccclxx°, congregata tota communitate in gilda aula Beverlaci, ordinatum fuerat et statutum per eandem communitatem super premissis, quod hic qui relinquens dictum officium et solverit penam supradictam, pro illo anno de dicto officio tantum sit exoneratus et quietus ; et quod in anno sequente ad dictum officium custodiendum licite eligi possit et assumi ; et sic de omnibus aliis officiis communitatem tangentibus minoris et inferioris gradus stet et fiat temporibus duraturis ; de pixidum collectione et talibus similibus.

Pena unius xij custodum electorum absentis.

25 April.

Item ordinatum est die Sancti Marci Evangelistę Anno Domini millesimo ccc° lxxvi° tota communitate presente, cum pleno consensu ejusdem, quod hic qui electus est ad essendum unum de custodibus ville Beverlaci, quod sit in gilda Aula, pulsante prima ; et si quis ultra moretur, si fuerit infra villam solvat sine remedio quadraginta solidos ad usum communitatis predictę.

Of the children of concubines.

Also, a burgess who keeps a concubine, and begets offspring of her out of wedlock, that offspring shall not be burgesses or members of the community, even if the father afterwards marry the mother of such children.

Of children begotten in adultery.

Also, it is decreed and ordered that if a married man who is a burgess beget children in adultery, those children shall not be burgesses or members of the community, unless they make their entrance in the Gild Hall before the governors and community.

The method of election of the twelve keepers of the town of Beverley.

Whereas it was aforetime ordered and decreed by the community of the town of Beverley on the election of the twelve keepers of the town of Beverley, that one who has been named and elected a keeper of the town of Beverley and refuses the office, shall pay the community 40s. ; but because it was not fully ordered or decreed whether the man who refuses the said office and pays the penalty aforesaid shall be acquitted and discharged of the said office for two years then next following, or whether he can be elected in the next year ;

Therefore, on Friday, 6 May, A.D. 1370, at an assembly of the whole community in the Gild Hall of Beverley, it was ordered and decreed by the same community on the matters aforesaid, that one who has abandoned the said office and paid the penalty aforesaid is only discharged and acquitted of the said office for that year ; and that in the following year he may be lawfully elected and taken to keep the said office ; and so shall it be hereafter of the other offices affecting the community of less and lower grade, as of the collection of boxes and the like.

Penalty for absence of one of the twelve keepers.

Also, it was ordered on S. Mark the Evangelist's day, A.D. 1376, in an assembly of the whole community, with the full consent of the same, that anyone elected to be one of the keepers of the town of Beverley be in the Gild Hall at first peal ; and if he is tardy, if in town, pay without redress 40s. to the use of the community aforesaid.

Ordinacio sigillacionis litterarum testimonialium.

26 April.

Item ordinatum est per Ricardum Holme, Thomam Frost et socios suos custodes ville Beverlaci die Sancti Marci Evangeliste Anno Domini millesimo ccc° sexto, et per totam communitatem confirmatum, quod amodo nullum factum sub sigillo communi aliqua de causa alicui deliberetur, priusquam scribatur in presenti Registro. Ita quod idem scriptum post terminum in eodem contentum per custodes qui pro tempore fuerint petatur et eisdem custodibus sursum tradatur. Et quod si aliqua littera testimonialis pro aliquo burgense fiat, quod sigilletur sub minori folio sigilli communis, et non cum alio.

Ordinacio commissionis xij custodum.

Item ordinatum est anno proximo supradicto quod Custodes electi in festo Sancti Marci Evangeliste quocumque anno in futuro, quod eorum commissio eisdem per communitatem facta sigilletur sigillo integro, et quod sursum tradatur in festo Sancti Marci Evangeliste vel antequam habeant acquietanciam suam sigillatam; et quod acquietancia sua super compotum suum de receptis et expensis per dictos custodes pro dicta communitate factis sigilletur cum minori folio sigilli communis, quia dicta acquietancia penes eos sine retradicione remanebit; et quod dicta acquietancia minori folio predicto sic sigillata sit eis in plenam allocacionem et deliberacionem pro tempore quo occupaverunt, imperpetuum.

Copie commissionis et acquietancie xij custodum cum copia acquietancie de Cotyngnam.

Pateat universis per presentes quod nos, Communitas ville Beverlaci, eligimus duodecim homines ville predictae, videlicet A, B, C, D, F, & G, juratos ad custodiendum villam predictam a festo Sancti Marci Evangeliste Anno Domini millesimo ccc°lxxiiij usque ad idem festum Sancti Marci Evangeliste anno revolutum Dantes eisdem et concedentes, vel septem eorum, plenam potestatem omnia et singula proficua et assessas communitatem predictam tangencia levandi et percipiendi Ac eciam pro tempore predicto omnia statuta et libertates et antiquas consuetudines ville predictae custodiendi et manutenendi, et contravenientes juxta consuetudines et statuta ville predictae castigandi et puniendi Ratum et gratum habentes et habituri quicquid predicti duodecim, vel septem eorum, circa conservacionem et custodiam ville predictae pro tempore predicto duxerint faciendum.

Order as to sealing testimonials.

Also, it is ordered by Richard Holmes, Thomas Frost, and their colleagues, keepers of the town of Beverley, on S. Mark the Evangelist's day, A.D. 1806, and confirmed by the whole community, that henceforth no deed under the common seal be delivered to anyone for any reason until it has been written in this register ; and that the same writing, after the term contained in the same, be demanded back by the keepers for the time being, and be surrendered to the same keepers. And if any letter testimonial be made for a burgess, that it be sealed with the small leaf of the common seal, and not with any other.

Order as to the commission of the twelve keepers.

Also, it is ordered in the year last aforesaid as to the keepers elected on S. Mark's day in any future year, that the commission made to them by the community be sealed with the whole seal, and be surrendered on S. Mark's day or before they have their acquittance sealed ; and that the acquittance on their account of receipts and expenses of the said keepers for the community be sealed with the smaller leaf of the common seal, because the acquittance will remain with them without re-delivery ; and that the said acquittance so sealed with the aforesaid smaller leaf be to them full allowance and release for the time in which they held office, for ever.

Copy of the commission and acquittance of the twelve keepers, with copy of the receipt of Cottingham.

Be it known to all by these presents that we, the community of the town of Beverley, have chosen twelve men of the town aforesaid, viz. A, B, C, D, F & G, sworn to keep the town aforesaid from S. Mark the Evangelist's day, A.D. 1874 to the same day next year ; Giving and granting to them, or seven of them, full powers of levying and receiving all and singular the profits and assessments belonging to the said community ; and also for the time aforesaid of keeping and upholding all the statutes and liberties and ancient customs of the town aforesaid and of chastising and punishing all those contravening them, according to the customs and statutes of the town aforesaid Holding and to hold good and agreed whatever for the time aforesaid the aforesaid twelve, or seven of them, may think fit to be done about the safeguarding and keeping of the town aforesaid. In testimony whereof we have made our seal to be annexed to these presents.

Given at Beverley on the said S. Mark's day in the year of our Lord aforesaid.

1369. Know all men by these presents that we A, B, C, D, F, and G, keepers of the town of Beverley, A.D. 1369, have received the account of H, J, K, L, M, N, and P, keepers of the town of Beverley, A.D. 1368, so that all reasonable allowances being made, we have found that the aforesaid H [etc.] and their colleagues beforementioned have faithfully administered their office, and have rendered a faithful account of all their receipts, outgoings, and expenses by them made in keeping the town aforesaid. Wherefore by these presents we acquit and discharge all and each from rendering any further account in the premisses. In witness &c.

Know all men by these presents that I, R. de E., Receiver of the Lady A., Countess of Kent and Lady of Cottingham, have received and had on the day of the making of these presents from the community of the town of Beverley, by the hands of the twelve keepers aforesaid of the town aforesaid, 40s. sterling for the term of Whitsuntide last past before the date of these presents; of which 40s. I confess that I, in the name of my lady aforesaid am fully paid, and the said community thereof acquitted by these presents. In witness &c. Dated &c.

Oath of a governor.

¹ A girthman or grithman meant a man who had taken sanctuary after committing a crime. The stone chair by the High Altar of the Minster (probably the Archbishop's chair), still preserved at Beverley and Hexham, was called the grith-stol or frith-stol, 'cathedra quietudinis vel pacis,' the stool or seat of peace (see Visitations and Memorials of Southwell Minster, edited by me, Camden Society, 1891, p. 192).

¹ These three wards, of which Keldgate is commonly qualified as Keldgate Prepositure, as opposed to Keldgate Archiepiscopi, were in the separate fee of the Provost (who was the territorial representative of the Prebendaries who constituted the Chapter), as distinct from the fee of the Archbishop on one side, who was general lord of the town and manor, and the common estate of the Chapter on the other.

The Chapter fee was a very small area.

² What these words apply to is not clear. They are in a later (Henry VIII.) hand, and were written as a sort of note towards, but not in, the margin of the leaf, between the Constabulary of Keldgate and the Chapter Fee. They apparently mean that an abatement of 53s. 4d. on every tax of a fifteenth and tenth, producing 50l., had been granted to the town.

Of the watch of the borough of the town of Beverley.

At a meeting of the chief persons of the community on 11 December, A.D. 1405, it was ordered that the community watch at the times it seems good to the keepers of the town; and whoever is not personally present to watch, if he is in strength and health, or by deputy if he is sick or impotent, pay to the community 1s., without any pardon. And that everyone summoned to watch be ready in person in his best array, under the penalty above mentioned.

Of the cry to be yearly made, and the hour of the watch.

And that there be yearly made proclamation, when it seems good to the keepers of the town and the lord's steward, that no host, wine seller, brewster, or seller [of beer] called tippler, allow anyone, native or stranger, to stay the night or reside in their taverns after 9 P.M., except trustworthy and honest persons for whose behaviour their hosts are willing to answer to the lord king and the community, under penalty of all they can forfeit to the king in this behalf. And that no burghess or other resident of Beverley keep in his inn or take any unknown stranger longer than sufficient time for coming and going, unless their hosts come in the first week of their stay before the keepers of the town with the same strangers, and there make known their names and persons, and undertake for their good

And that no resident wander in the streets within the liberty of Beverley by night after 9 o'clock p.m., or stranger after 8 o'clock, without a light and a reasonable excuse, under the penalty of imprisonment until provision and order for the release of the offenders have been made by the keepers of the community and the lord's officers.

Penalty for abusing one of the Keepers.

Also, it is ordained by the whole community that if anyone blame or abuse the twelve keepers for the time being, or any of them, in the execution of their office, he shall pay to the community 40s.

Penalty for abusing the Town Clerk.

And if anyone abuse the Common Clerk of the Gild Hall in the execution of his office, he shall pay without delay to the community 6s. 8d.

Penalty for abusing the Common Sergeant.

And if anyone abuse the Common Sergeant in the execution of his office, he shall pay to the community 8s. 4d.

Orders for Figham pasture.¹

For the pasture of Beverley provision was made as it had been anciently ordered in form underwritten: viz. that in the pasture of Figham no ox or bullock of three years old or draught cattle may go at any time of the year to feed there, nor may sheep or swine or geese enter that pasture; and if any waif or stray beast be found there, it be delivered to the bailiff of the Archbishop of York, to whom such waif and stray belongs; and that they pay 12d. to the community of the town of Beverley for the grass, as has been anciently accustomed.

And that all having common in the same pasture pay their share for their cattle and give their share to making and repairing the ditch round and in the pasture and of sewerage it when needful. And that no one have any right of common in it but a burgess living in the town, peer and partner in lot and scot and contributing to the business of the community. And that no burgess of Beverley, holding 1467. Item Anno Domini m° ccc° lxxij° ordinatum est in Gilda Aula Beverlaci, tota communitate ibidem collecta, quod ille qui amodo erit liber de theoloneo occasione empcionis c pedum terre, quod veniat ad Gildam Aulam coram Custodibus ville et faciat ibi notum ubi terra sua jacet et monstret cartam suam et solvat pro introitu communitati iiijd., clerico jd., communi servienti jd.

Ordinacio de Westwod.

Item ordinatum est quod nullus bos nec ovis ingrediatur pasturam de Westwod ut pascantur ibidem. Et quod nullus de Southburton habeat aliqua pecora in eadem exceptis dominicis porcis, quos habent ex antiqua gracia, et hactenus graciose et permissive.

Accio inter Priorem de Wartre et burgenses Beverlaci.

1488. Item die Veneris proximo post festum translacionis Sancti Thome Anno Domini m° ccc° octogesimo octavo venit Thomas Roland, con-canonicus prioratus de Wartre et custos domus Sancti Egidii in Beverlaco, pro eo, quod quedam discordia mota fuit inter honorabiles burgenses communitatis ville Beverlaci et Priorem de Wartre, ac dictum Thomam, concanonicum ejus, super quibusdam oneribus spinarum annuatim per quamlibet septimanam percipiendis extra land in any foreign country township outside Beverley, lead or cause to be led cows which he kept there during winter to maintain his household and his lambs, to feed in the said pasture of Figham in summer, unless they are being fed for the larder and maintenance of his house in Beverley; and anyone doing otherwise and convicted, to be punished according to the order of the twelve keepers of the town of Beverley according to the measure of his offence.

Of trespass in the Figham, with penalty.

Also, A.D. 1407, Robert Puttok, with others, broke the heads of the gutters, called clowses, at the Figham and Swinemoor and elsewhere, and threw mud from them. Therefore he placed himself at the mercy of the keepers, with Thomas White, sen., as surety, and laid down 8s. 4d., because he was poor, and 16d. is given back to him by way of charity; and the penalty is laid on him that he trespass so no more under penalty of 20s.

Order as to purchase of 100 ft.

Also, A.D. 1367, it was ordered in Beverley Gild Hall, in an assembly of the whole community, that anyone who henceforward shall become free of toll by purchasing 100 feet of land, come to the Gild Hall before the keepers of the town and make known to them where the land lies and show his deed, and pay for entrance, to the community 4d., to the Clerk 1d., and to the Common Sergeant 1d.

Order as to Westwood.

Also it was ordered that no ox or sheep go into the pasture of Westwood to feed there, and that no one of South Burton have any cattle in the same, except the pigs of the demesne,¹ which they have by ancient favour, and hitherto by favour and leave.

Action between the Prior of Wartre and the burgesses of Beverley.

Also, Friday after July 8, A.D. 1388, came Thomas Roland, fellow-canon of the Priory of Wartre and Warden of the house of S. Giles in Beverley, because a quarrel had arisen between the honourable burgesses of Beverley and the Prior of Wartre and the said Thomas his fellow-canon, as to certain loads of thorns yearly taken every week boscum de Westwod ad opus domus Sancti Egidii, intuitu caritatis, et super hoc dies datus est dicto Priori et Thome concanonico ejus per consensum Johannis Kelk, Stephani Coppandale et sociorum suorum, juratorum ad custodiendum villam predictam Anno supradicto in Aula gilda Sancti Johannis Beverlaci. Et medio tempore, viz. die Veneris supradicto venit predictus Thomas in Aulam predictam et supplicavit dicto Johanni Kelk, Stephano et sociis suis ut possit habere onera sua predictarum spinarum pro Dei amore et intuitu caritatis, non obstante quod dictus Prior et Thomas concanonicus ejus habuerunt diem ad ostendendum cartas et munimenta sua, per que clamant onera predictarum spinarum, usque ad festum Sancti Michaelis Archangeli extunc proximum sequens post datam presencium; et negatum sibi fuit. Nec postea venit Prior neque dominus Thomas ut supra ad diem sibi assignatum.

Licencia concessa sororibus de Kynwalgraves ibidem.

1399. Item die Veneris proximo ante festum Ascencionis Domini anno Domini m° ccc° nonagesimo nono Alicia de Burton, Alicia de Feriby et Matilda Kyell, consorores de Kynwalgraves, venerunt, tam pro se quam consororibus suis commorantibus apud Kynwaldgraves, coram Nicholao Ryse, Johanne Bewme et sociis suis custodibus ville Beverlaci anno predicto et pecierunt caritative licenciam habendi pasturam pro uno tauro et xij vaccis suis, et eciam pro xx porcis suis in Westwod hoc anno. Et habuerunt licenciam pro hoc anno tantum amore Dei et intuitu caritatis. Et sic debent petere licenciam de anno in annum habendi pecora ibidem secundum quantitatem et discrecionem Custodum.

Licencia concessa Fratribus Minoribus ibidem.

from the wood of Westwood for the use of S. Giles's house by way of charity ; and thereupon a day was assigned to the said Prior and Thomas his fellow-canon with the consent of John Kelk, Stephen Coppandale and their colleagues sworn to keep the town aforesaid in the year abovesaid in the Gild Hall of S. John of Beverley ; and meanwhile, viz. on Friday aforesaid, came the said Thomas into the Hall aforesaid and asked the said John Kelk, Stephen and their colleagues that he might have to Michaelmas next his loads of thorns aforesaid for the love of God and by way of charity, notwithstanding that the said Prior and Thomas his fellow-canon had day assigned to show their deeds and muniments by which they claim the loads of thorns aforesaid ; and it was denied them. Nor did the Prior or Thomas come on the day assigned them.

License granted to the sisters of Killingwoldgraves there.

Also, Friday before Ascension Day, A.D. 1399, Alice of Burton, Alice of Ferriby, and Matilda Kyell, co-sisters of Killingwoldgraves, came as well for themselves as for their co-sisters living at Killingwoldgraves, before Nicholas Rise, John Bewholme and their colleagues, keepers of the town of Beverley in the year aforesaid, and asked by way of charity leave to have pasture for one bull and twelve cows of theirs, and also for twenty pigs in Westwood this year, and they had leave for this year only, for the love of God and by way of charity. And¹ so they ought to ask leave from year to year to have cattle there according to the quantity and the discretion of the keepers.

License granted to the Friars Minor there.

Also, Friday next before S. Nicholas the Bishop (6 Dec.), A.D. 1356, came Friar John Butler, of the order of the Friars Minor of Beverley, on behalf of the convent aforesaid, before the keepers of the town aforesaid in the Gild Hall, and asked by way of charity leave to take sand in the wood of Westwood to finish their buildings ; and the keepers gave leave to the said friar John and his convent to take sand there to finish their said work, by way of charity, for this occasion only.

¹ The Town Minute Book shows them coming year by year and asking for this.

This entry has been cancelled, probably upon the dissolution of the house.

Pena porcorum vagancium.

Item ordinatum est per communitatem quod nullus porcus invenietur vagus in viis neque stratis; et si fuerit, solvetur pro eo communitati qualibet vice, ijd., et communi clienti obolum, pro labore suo, si quos capiat. Sed sues grosse et habentes porcellos sunt excepte, et porci qui vadunt sub custodia porcarii ad pasturam.

- Swynemore. Ordinacio boum et jumentorum.

Item ordinatum est quod boves ad lardarium et jumentum pascantur in pastura de Swynmore, et quod non superoneretur cum bestiis aliorum communicantium in eadem. Et quod nullus introitus permittatur nec utatur de Sandholme neque Stork ad eandem pasturam per pontem vel aliter, nisi per communem et antiquum introitum ad crucem lapideam; et quod nullus habeat aliquos boves vel equos tractantes in caruca sua in pastura predicta.

De ovibus in publicis stratis et introitibus.

Et quod oves burgensium Beverlaci pascantur et teneantur in publicis stratis in introitibus et exitibus circumquaque villam Beverlaci sicut antiquitus et hactenus consueverunt.

De bestiis de Stork et Sandholme.

1399. Item, ordinatum est anno Domini m° ccc° nonagesimo nono, per Nicholaum Ryse, Willelmum Rolleston et socios suos, Custodes ville Beverlaci, et eciam per alios predecessores suos, et totam communitatem ejusdem ville, quod omnes tenentes commorantes tam in villa de Stork quam Sandholme habeant quolibet anno nisi quinquaginta bestias tantum pasturantes in pastura de Swynemore, et non plures.

De porcione ovium carnificum in Swynemore cum pena.

1362. Item, anno Domini millesimo ccc° lxij, Custodes ville Beverlaci cum assensu communitatis ordinaverunt et consenserunt inter se sumere de quolibet bidente invento in Swynemore ultra porcionem debitam, viz. xl bidentes, prima vice jd. Et si ultra porcionem aliquo tempore inveniantur aliqui bidentes in eadem pastura ultra porcionem predictam quod quilibet bidens solvat communitati pro qualibet vice iiijd.

Penalty for swine at large.

Also, it was ordered by the community, that no pig be found at large in the roads or streets, and if so found, there shall be paid for it to the community each time 2d., and to the Common Sergeant $\frac{1}{2}$ d. for his labour, if he take any. But swine with young or having a litter are excepted, as also pigs going under the care of the swineherd to pasture.

Swinemoor. Order for bullocks and beasts of burden.

Also, it was ordered that oxen for the larder and beasts of burden may feed in the pasture of Swinemoor, and that it be not surcharged with the beasts of others commoning in the same; and that no entrance be allowed or used from Sandholme and Stork to the same pasture by bridge or otherwise, except by the common and ancient entrance at the Stone Cross, and that none have any oxen or horses drawing in his plough in the pasture aforesaid.

Of sheep in the public streets and entries.

And that sheep of burgesses of Beverley may feed and be kept in the public streets, in the entries and exits all round the town of Beverley as they have anciently and hitherto been accustomed to be.

Of the beasts of Stork and Sandholme.

Also, it was ordered, A.D. 1899, by Nicholas Rise, William Rolleston and their colleagues, keepers of the town of Beverley, and also by others their predecessors and the whole community of the same town, that all tenants living as well in Stork as in Sandholme have every year 50 beasts only pasturing in the pasture of Swinemoor, and no more.

Of the share of butchers' sheep in Swinemoor with penalty.

Also, A.D. 1862, the keepers of the town of Beverley with the assent of the community ordered and agreed among themselves to take from every two-year old sheep found in Swinemoor beyond the allowed number, viz. 40 sheep, for the first offence 1d.; and if any sheep at any time beyond the allowed number be found in the same pasture, that then each sheep pay to the community each time 4d.

¹ This is written in the margin, and the whole entry as to the butchers' sheep is cancelled.

By consent of the whole community on S. Mark's day, A.D. 1428, [this] is to be observed for ever.

It is annulled.

Note as to Sanctuary men.

The community of the town of Beverley assembled together in the Gild Hall on Tuesday, 16 March, A.D. 1429, for a certain letter to the twelve keepers or governors of the town of Beverley undermentioned in the name of Sir Henry Broomfleet, knight, and Mr. John Ellerker; the contents or purport of which letter was this, that for the respect due to their worships and at their request, the undermentioned twelve keepers or governors of the town aforesaid should admit William Gelle, fisherman, and make him a burgess. This being shown to the community aforesaid, they with one consent said that the said William Gelle is a sanctuary man, and that inasmuch as it was ordered and decreed before that day that they would make no sanctuary man a burgess, therefore he should not be admitted to that freedom, nor any other sanctuary man for ever.

And it was ordered and decreed the said day and year that no burgess of the town of Beverley who is a sanctuary man should for offence against the common people or against the peace of the Lord King henceforth carry on him a knife or dagger, except with blunted points, nor any club or sword in the town of Beverley, on pain of forfeiture of the same to the Archbishop, and forfeiture of his burgess-ship to the community of the town of Beverley for ever.

And as to the common lanes enclosed and rents yearly held in the hands of divers burgesses of Beverley and of others of the same town, without any payment to the community aforesaid: it was ordered and decreed on the day and year aforesaid to be for ever observed by the community aforesaid that the holders of such lanes shall pay all and singular their past arrears without delay; and if they hold them afterwards, that from that time they shall pay their rent yearly to the community or the enclosures be thrown open by the community aforesaid. And that these orders and decrees may hold for ever, they were ratified and confirmed by Roger Rolleston [and eleven others], the twelve keepers or governors of the community of the town of Beverley the day and year aforesaid, with the assent of all the aldermen and stewards of the aforesaid town, and the majority of all the burgesses there present.

Order for waggons and carts shod with iron.

Also, it was ordered, on S. Wilfrid's day, A.D. 1867, in the Gild Hall of Beverley by an assembly of the whole community there, that no cart shod with iron shall be driven or enter the town of Beverley by any burgess, from the Purification of the Virgin (2 February) next; and if any do so, for each time it comes in, he who had it driven in shall pay 12d. to the community, without remission, till the said community repeal the said order.

Order for carts shod with iron.

Also, S. Mark's day, A.D. 1869, the whole community being in the Gild Hall, by the full and common assent of the same community, it is ordered and decreed that henceforth no waggon or cart shod with iron belonging to any burgess or resident in Beverley shall go or be led into the same town by any means; and if any waggon henceforth be led against the order aforesaid, there shall be paid to the community for each time 2s.; and for each cart which shall be found to have offended against the foregoing order, each time, 12d.

Order for carts.

Also, A.D. 1891, viz. on S. Mark's day, it is ordered by the whole community of the town of Beverley, that no man shall have any cart shod with iron entering on the pavement of Beverley after Lammas day next, on the penalty of forfeiting 1d. to the community for each carriage, so often as he shall be convicted against the order aforesaid.

Order for porters and creelmen.

Penalty for porters and creelmen.

Also, it is ordered by the keepers of the town of Beverley, A.D. 1377, that if any porters or creelmen take for their pains in carrying otherwise than is ordered above, that he who is found in fault before the twelve keepers of the town of Beverley, or seven of them, pay for each offence to the use of the community 40d. without remission.

Also, it is ordered, Friday after S. Mark's day, A.D. 1418, and decreed by Adam Tirwhitt, John Atwell, Thomas Swanland, Thomas Coldbeck, William Holme, John Holme, Thomas Joliffe, John Spencer, butcher, and their colleagues the twelve keepers or governors of the town aforesaid. The old order of porters and creelmen and other common carriers was read, viz. that they should carry on horses in creels and sacks all goods that could conveniently and safely be carried on them, and not on sleds, under penalty of 3s. 4d. to be forfeited to the community.

Orders for Walkerbeck and Millbeck.

Also, Friday being S. Mark's day, A.D. 1371, it was ordered with the consent of the whole community in the Gild Hall of Beverley, that there should be two keepers assigned to keep and see that no ashes, straw, or other thing fouling or stopping the flow of water, should be put in Walkerbeck,¹ or Millbeck; and that every neighbour abutting on Aldgate may lawfully put his muck in the same, so long as it is not a nuisance to the common street, nor does damage to any walls there. Also, it was ordered on the day aforesaid, that muck put on the Beckbank should be moved before two high tides.² And anyone hereafter offending in the premises to pay to the community 6d., of which the presenters to have 1d.

Order against putting flax in the common ditch at Stork and Sandholme.

Also 10 July, A.D. 1369, came into the Gild Hall Katharine Spink, Robert Williamson and wife, Thomas of Stork and wife, and many more of Stork and Sandholme impleaded and convicted of putting flax in the common ditch there, and asked pardon, and it is now granted on condition that if any of them be found doing it again, they pay to the community 8s. 4d.

Order as to not putting flax in the common ditches of Beverley.

Also, on the aforesaid 10 July in the year before mentioned, Stephen Stirtwayne and Richard Buck and others living in Keldgate and Lairgate, impeached and convicted at the Gild Hall for putting flax in the common ditches, asked pardon as above, and are pardoned on the condition before-written, paying as above.

Order as to wares for sale at the Beck.

Also, it was ordered January 16, A.D. 1405, and provided on S. Mark's day next following and decreed by the whole community that no burgess or stranger carrying and bringing faggots, firewood, coals or other fuel, or salt to sell in the Beck, sell any of the said goods or the like before they have been appraised by two of the twelve keepers, under penalty of the loss of 8s. 4d. to the use of the community as often as they are convicted thereof. And that no burgess or other resident in Beverley buy any of the goods aforesaid before they have been appraised, under the penalty aforesaid, nor forestall them nor buy them in gross to sell again in retail before the commons have been served, under the penalty above mentioned, nor buy in the Beck to the deceit of the community, asserting that he buys elsewhere outside the liberty.

Order as to carriage of stone there.

Also, A.D. 1400, Thomas Swanland, William Mallard, and Thomas Coldbeck, churchwardens of S. Mary's Church, Beverley, caused to discarcari fecerunt super ripam Torrentis unam navem Willelmi Skynner de magnis petris ad opus capelle predictæ, contra ordinaciones et antiqua statuta; ideo posuerunt se in gratiam et exposuerunt secundum antiqua statuta xls.; et reliberantur per gratiam xij custodum, quod si imposterum in tali forma transgrediantur, solvent communitati xls. sine pardonacione aliquali.

De solo communitatis ad Torrentem non capiendo.

1404. Item quinto die Marci anno regni Henrici quarti sexto, Thomas Whyte et socii sui, tegulatores ville Beverlaci, venerunt coram Johanne Kelk et sociis suis, custodibus ville Beverlaci, et fatebantur quod ipsi ceperunt solum communitatis ad Torrentem ad inde faciendum tegulas sine licencia xij custodum. Et sciendum est quod illa delicta condonantur sub hac condicione, quod ipsi amodo non capiant solum ibidem, et si quis amodo inventus fuerit culpabilis, quod extunc solvet dicte communitati xls. tociens quociens inventus fuerit culpabilis.

De licencia capiendi sursum petras ad Torrentem.

1394. Item die Martis proximo post festum Sancti Benedicti Abbatis anno Domini m^o ccc^o nonagesimo quarto venerunt Dominus Robertus Lowthorp, vicarius ecclesie Beati Johannis Beverlaci, et Dominus Johannes Tathewell, custodes fabrice ecclesie supradicte, nomine Sancti Johannis Beverlaci et canonicorum ejusdem ecclesie, in Gilda Aula Beati Johannis Beverlaci, coram duodecim custodibus ville supradicte et multis aliis probis hominibus ejusdem ville, et petierunt licenciam ad sursum capiendum quamdam porcionem petrarum apud Torrentem extra unam navem cum predictis [sic] petris pro reparacione unius vawte ultra tumbam Sancti Johannis in ecclesia supradicta, sub hac condicione quod predictæ petre cariabuntur cum sleddis usque ad monasterium Beati Johannis Beverlaci predicti. Et eciam sub hac condicione quod amodo nullas petras capient sursum ibidem per aliquam consuetudinem, sed tantum apud Grovall vel alibi ubi ad nullum nocimentum poterit esse communitati ville predictæ, nec ad pavementum ejusdem ville.

1412. ¹ Item ordinatum est anno Domini millesimo cccc^o duodecimo, quelibet navis dicta cache, discartata ultra pontes ad Torrentem cum thak, stramine, terricidiis, feno, sand, fagottis solvat ad mundacionem be unloaded on the Beck bank a ship of William Skinner with great stones for the use of the chapel aforesaid, against the orders and ancient statutes ; for this they placed themselves at mercy, and laid down 40s. according to the ancient statutes ; and the money was repaid to them by favour of the twelve keepers, but if they trespass in like sort again they will pay to the community 40s. without any pardon.

Of not taking the soil of the community at the Beck.

Also, 5 March, 6 Henry IV., Thomas White and his fellows, tilers of the town of Beverley, came before John Kelk and his fellows, keepers of the town of Beverley, and confessed that they took the soil of the community at the Beck to make tiles (bricks), without the leave of the twelve keepers. And it is to be known that these offences were pardoned on this condition, that from henceforward they do not take the soil there, and if henceforward any of them is found guilty of doing so he shall pay to the said community 40s. so often as he shall be found guilty.

Of licence to take up stones at the Beck.

Also, Tuesday after S. Benedict's day, A.D. 1394, came Sir Robert Lowthorp, a vicar of S. John's Church, Beverley, and Sir John Tathewell, churchwardens of the church aforesaid, in the name of S. John of Beverley and the canons of the same church, in the Gild Hall of S. John of Beverley, before the twelve keepers of the town aforesaid and many other good men of the same town, and asked leave to take a certain lot of stones at the Beck from a ship laden with the aforesaid stones for the repair of a vault beyond the tomb of S. John in the church aforesaid, on this condition, that the said stones shall be carried on sleds to the Minster of the Blessed John of Beverley aforesaid ; and also on condition that thenceforth they will take no stones there by virtue of any custom, but only at Grove Hill¹ or elsewhere, where it can be no nuisance to the community of the town aforesaid or the pavement of the same town.

Also, it was ordered, A.D. 1412, that every ship called ketch unloaded beyond the Beck bridges with thatch, straw, turves, hay, sand, faggots, pay towards the cleansing of the market-place there $\frac{1}{2}$ d. And if

Et Croftum inter Swynmore et Prest crofft quod fuit Thome Lumbard, injuste privatur, et Thomas Middleton negat Et super hoc induxit Adam Barker et alios qui testantur quod non separale est omni tempore anni sed communia.

Et Prest Crofft juxta habetur usque nunc.

Et Croftum Thome Coppandall juxta habetur usque nunc.

Et Crofftum [sic] Willelmi Cokerell, quod Ricardus Alkbarow tenet in Norwode juxta tenturas, quod idem Ricardus per v annos communitatem inde privavit.

Et Crofftum quod fuit Johannis Bawde est communis [sic] tempore aperto.

Et duo Crofta Domini Johannis de Routhe super Sprynghedes, a tempore quo non extat memoria fuerunt communia tempore aperto, quousque Petrus Kyllom et pater ejus ea separavit, et communitatem privavit.

Et via ex transverso Bischopcrofft fuit communia quousque per Ricardum Cokeram privatur.

Et unum Croftum, quod fuit Thome Gervays, omni tempore, quousque Willelmus Sighsill communitatem privavit.

Who say that S. Giles's croft was always average to the time when Thomas Yole occupied it.

And Herring-croft, which was Thomas Lombard's, till Robert Waldby took it to farm and deprived the community of it.

And the croft between Swinemoor and Priest-croft, which was Thomas Lombard's, is wrongfully taken away, and Thomas Middleton denies this. And thereon he brought in witness Adam Barker and others who give evidence that it is not in severalty all the year, but common.

And Priest-croft is held on the same terms till now ; and Thomas Coppandale's croft is held on the same terms until now.

And William Cokerell's croft, which Richard Alkbarow holds in Norwood by the Tenters, of which the same Richard has deprived the community for five years.

And the croft which was John Bawd's is common during the open time.

And two crofts of Sir John of Routh at Springheads were from time immemorial common at the open time, till Peter Kilham and his father made them several, and deprived the community of them.

And the road across Bishopcroft was common till made private by Richard Cokerham.

And a croft which was Thomas Jervis's, at all times, till William Sixhill deprived the community of it.

Et Croftum Roberti Tirwhitt, a tempore quo non extat memoria, fuit communi Averice, quousque Robertus Tirwhitt perquisivit de Ricardo Beverlay.

Et terre terrarum Prioris de Wartre et aliorum, quas Ricardus Buk tenet, sub gardino Thome Coppandale prope maister Willelmum Engys, usque viam juxta molendinum, fuerunt Aveyce quousque Ricardus Buk privavit. Et Croftum dictum Lelycrofft, a tempore quo non extat memoria, fuit communi Averice quousque idem Ricardus privavit.

¹ This refers to an entry on a proceeding in the Archbishop's Court on 11 Sept. 9 Henry vi., 1430, against two men of Mol-descroft for turning a Beverley man and his cow out of the common pasture, but where does not appear. ² f. 14b.

³ The rubricated portion begins again here.

And Robert Tirwhitt's croft was common average from time immemorial till Robert Tirwhitt acquired it of Richard Beverley.

And of the lands of the Prior of Wartre and others, the lands which Richard Buck holds under the garden of Thomas Coppandale by Mr. William Ing's as far as the road by the mill, were average till Richard Buck made them private. And the croft called Lilycroft from time immemorial was common average till the same Richard made it private.

And the lane by Withernwick; and the lane by Easingwold. And the lane to the Friars Minor; and the road by Mr. William Ing's with the Horse and Sack¹ is enclosed.

And that a certain croft of John Bawd's, called Bawdcroft, is common, and not several, for the beasts of the burgesses to pasture there.

Of the herbage of Lilycroft.

Be it known to all that on S. Mark's day, A.D. 1445, it was granted by the whole community of the town of Beverley, and by the assent and consent of Thomas Everingham (&c.), the twelve keepers or governors of the said town of Beverley, decreed and confirmed, to John Portington, junior, that² all the common of herbage which the said community had or has, or could or ought to have, in a certain croft of the said John Portington called Lilycroft above mentioned To have and to hold to the said John Portington, his heirs and assigns for ever, free from all claim, contradiction or hindrance of the said community or their successors for the future &c.

Look further for the case against the men of Molescroft on the back of this leaf.

Orders as to Grove Hill.³

Also, Richard Hammondson, John Catherineson and Roger of Storke came into the Gild Hall of the Blessed John of Beverley, A.D. 1391, before the twelve keepers of the town of Beverley, and took from them a certain piece of land called Grove-hill-dike, rendering for this

De animalibus ibidem pasturantibus.

De communi solo ibidem capto.

1407. Item quinto die mensis Julii anno Domini millesimo ccccviij^o, Johannes Ryot cepit quoddam commune solum apud Grovall inter solum Thome Frost et Grovaldyke, reddendo per annum xvij^d.
Item Johannes Bentley cepit anno predicto solum communitatis ibidem reddendo per annum ijs.

De communi solo ibidem capto.

1370. Item die Veneris in festo S. Lucie virginis A.D. millesimo cccclxx^o, Thomas Whyt, tegulator, cepit tegulariam de Aldebek a festo Natalis Domini anno predicto usque ad finem quatuor annorum tunc proximo sequencium, reddendo inde communitati vj millia tegularum per annum.

1365. Item ordinatum est anno Domini millesimo ccc^o lxx^o, per Ricardum Holme, Thomam Frost, Willelmum Tirwhitt, Thomam Jolyf, Johannem Chaumberlayn, Robertum de Burton, Thomam Ladychapman, Adam Coke, Ricardum de Midilton, Thomam de Etton, Thomam de Manby et Walterum Matfray, Custodes sive Gubernatores ville Beverlaci, quod nullum forum pro carnibus vendendis teneatur nullicubi infra Beverlacum nisi in antiquo foro carnificum et in Barlyholme, diebus fori et mercati exceptis.

De carnibus ultra sesonam tentis et venditis.

Item ordinatum est anno Domini proximo supradicto, quod si aliquis carnificum vendat vel vendicioni disponat carnes superseminatas vel year 3,000 bricks called wall tiles to be paid and delivered at Michaelmas to the community of the town of Beverley, in respect of the licence to have it.

Of beasts pasturing there.

Also, A.D. 1391, Richard son of Nicholas of Thurne, wilfully put his beasts on the Grove Hill green to pasture there. It was held by the keepers of the town of Beverley, in the year of our Lord aforesaid, that if his beasts be found there again, he shall pay to the community 6s. 8d., and for his offence shall do service to the community for two days.

Of common land taken in the same place.

Also, 5 July, A.D. 1407, John Ryot took a certain piece of land at Grove Hill between land of Thomas Frost and Grove-hill-dike, paying by the year 18d.

Also in the same year aforesaid, John Bentley took land of the community there, paying by the year 2s.

Of common land taken in the same place.

Also, Friday, S. Lucy's day (13 December), A.D. 1370, Thomas White, tiler, took the tilery of Oldbeck from Christmas that year to the end of four years next following, rendering therefor to the community 6,000 tiles a year.

Orders as to the butchers' market.

Also, it was ordered, A.D. 1365, by Richard Holme (&c.), keepers or governors of the town of Beverley, that no market should be held for selling meat anywhere in Beverley except in the ancient butchers' market and in Barleyholme, fair and market days only excepted.

Of meat kept or sold out of season.

Also, it was ordered in the year last mentioned, that if a butcher sell, or put out for sale, meat maggoty or kept beyond the proper tentas ultra sesonam, vel de morina mortuas sive carion, quod pro qualibet vice quod aliquis eorum fuerit racionabiliter convictus super aliquo criminum vel defectuum predictorum, quod sine remedio solvat Communitati vjs. viijd.

De sanguine aut aliquod corruptum [sic] in stratis positis [sic].

Item ordinatum est per Communitatem quod si aliquis carnificum vel serviencium suorum ponant scarne sanguinem aut aliquod aliud corruptum in altis stratis seu Walkerbek, vel quibuscumque aliis locis quam ubi per communitatem fuerint assignati, quod quilibet eorum sic delinquens solvat communitati xld.

De canibus carnificum custodiendis.

1367. Item pro diversis querelis factis de canibus carnificum, ordinatum est anno Domini m^o ccc^o lxxij per Custodes ville Beverlaci, quod si canis alicujus carnificis inveniatur in via, nisi habeat custodem, vel si mordeat aliquem porcum vel canem alicujus extranei, quod hic cujus est canis delinquens solvat communitati xld.

De carnibus vendendis.

1370. Item proclamatum fuit in Curia Domini Archiepiscopi, die Lune in festo Sancte Marie Magdalene anno Domini m^o ccc^o lxx^o; quod quilibet carnifex vendat carnes suas occisas in shoppa sua propria, ita quod non mittat alteri socio suo carnifici ad vendendum sub pena forisfacture earum.

De eodem.

Item quod quilibet carnifex vendat carnes suas infra quatuor dies a tempore occisionis earum, et in quarto die mittat eas in salem sub pena predicta.

De foro carnificum et piscium.

Item quod carnifices intrinseci stent ad unum finem fori domini eligendum per eos, Et quod carnifices extrinseci stent ad alterum finem, ita quod forum piscium sit medium inter eos die fori; ita quod carnifices non intromittant simul et semel.

time, or dead of murrain, or carrion, for every time any of them has been duly convicted of any of the crimes or offences aforesaid, he should pay, without remedy, to the community 6s. 8d.

Of blood or any tainted matter placed in the streets.

Also, it was ordered by the community that if a butcher or any of his men put offal, blood or any tainted thing in the high streets or Walkerbeck, or any other place except where they have been appointed by the community, everyone so offending pay to the community 40d.

Of the custody of butchers' dogs.

Also, because of divers complaints made about butchers' dogs it was ordered, A.D. 1367, by the keepers of the town of Beverley, that if any butcher's dog be found in the road without a keeper, or if he bite a stranger's pig or dog, he whose dog commits the offence pay to the community 40d.

Of meat for sale.

Also, proclamation was made in the Lord Archbishop's court on Monday, S. Mary Magdalen's day (22 July), A.D. 1370, that every butcher was to sell meat killed by himself in his own shop, and not to send it to another butcher to sell, under penalty of forfeiting the same.

Of the same.

Also, that every butcher must sell his meat within four days from the time of killing, or on the fourth day put it in salt, under the penalty aforesaid.

Of the market of butchers and fishmongers.

Also, that town butchers stand at one end of the lord's market to be chosen by them, and strange butchers at the other end; so that the fish market may be between them on market day; so that the butchers do not intermeddle with each other.

4 May, A.D. 1409, it was ordered that no cook was to buy fish in the market, or poultry at the cross, before 8 A.M. for the future, under horam octavam diei amodo in futurum, sub pena ijs. iiijd. communitati solvendorum; et temporibus nundinarum emant tempestivius sed modo honesto, sub eadem pena.

penalty of 8s. 4d., to be paid to the community; and on fair-days they may buy earlier, but moderately so, under the same penalty.

As to keeping corn for sale.

80 September, A.D. 1410, because it had been ordered on S. Mark's day that no one living in Beverley should keep corn for sale after the ringing of the common bell after 12 noon, and if he did should pay the community for every offence 12d., and John Gardham pleads guilty to doing so, and swore that he did not know of the order; therefore this time he is let off, and warned not to offend hereafter under penalty of 2s.

Sale of ash-trees in Bardike.

A.D. 1407, Richard Cockeram bought of the twelve keepers of the community seven ash trees growing in the Bardike, behind William Frost's garden by North Bar, for 6s. 8d., which he paid.

Penalty of surrender of burgess-ship.

Also, it was ordered on Wednesday, S. Mark's day, A.D. 1408, by the twelve keepers of Beverley and the whole community of the same town, that if a burgess of the same town henceforth surrender his burgess-ship with the object of not being obedient and amenable to the twelve keepers of the town aforesaid for the time being, he shall forfeit and pay to the said community 10l. so often as he shall have been found guilty thereof.

Order as to the cobblers' market.

Also, it was ordered and agreed by the whole community of the town of Beverley, with the consent of the council and bailiff of the Lord Archbishop of York, A.D. 1364, that all the cobblers of the same town, and also strangers of that craft, henceforward keep their stalls in the market assigned for this purpose, called the Shoemarket, as of old they used to do on market and fair days, and in no other place in the same town.

De cathenis remanentibus.

1891. Item, memorandum quod Johannes Trippok, Thomas Yole et socii sui Custodes ville Beverlaci anno Domini m^o ccc^{mo} lxxxj, die Jovis proximo ante festum Pentecostes anno predicto, liberaverunt Johanni de Holme, Ade Barker, Johanni Carleton et sociis suis, custodibus ville predictae: In primis unam Cathenam apud le Bek continentem et habentem in se lij linkes ;
 Unam cathenam in Flemmyngate habentem in se l linkes ;

Of the chains kept.

Also, be it remembered that John Tripock, Thomas Yole and their fellows, keepers of the town of Beverley, A.D. 1391, Thursday before Whitsuntide in the year aforesaid, delivered to John of Holme, Adam Barker, John Carlton and their fellows, keepers of the town aforesaid : first, a chain at the Beck containing 52 links ;

Next a chain in Flemingate containing 50 links ;

A chain at North Bar containing 44 links ;

Two chains lying in the Gild Hall, one containing 36 links, the other 26 links.

Of the cobblers' market.

Also, it was ordered, A.D. 1364, that no shoemaker living in the town of Beverley sell shoes at fair or other market time in any place outside his own house, except in the market where it was ordered of old, as above, under penalty of 6s. 8d., to be paid to the community for every offence.

So all the shoemakers aforesaid agreed that if any of their brethren break any order contained in their Domesday Roll he shall incur the payment of the same penalty.

Also, A.D. 1375, it was ordered and agreed by the shoemakers of the town of Beverley that none of the Gild of Shoemakers of Beverley should have any new livery, except of the same suit as his brethren, on the day in which they assembled in their castle against the coming of S. John of Beverley, under penalty of 20d., to be paid to the light of the said gild, and 20d. to the community of Beverley.

Order between tanners and cobblers.

Also, it was ordered by the whole community that no shoemaker practise the craft of a tanner at the same time as that of a shoemaker, under penalty of 40s. to be paid to the community as often as he is found guilty.

Order between the same.

Also, it was ordered by the said community that no tanner practise the craft of shoemakers at the same time as that of tanners, under penalty of 40s. to be paid in manner abovesaid.

Order for livery of shearmen.

Also, Tuesday before S. Mark's day, A.D. 1396, come Walter Rasket, Robert Shearman, John Vesey, Thomas Matfray, Thomas Clok, Robert Clok, Thomas Shearman, Robert Stephenson, and Robert of Bridlington, before the twelve keepers of the town of Beverley, and asked the aforesaid twelve keepers that this year they should not be charged with any clothing at Ascension Day, because the time was too short; but they granted with their full consent before the twelve keepers that thenceforward, from year to year, each of them should be clothed in new livery, every year, of the same suit, in honour of S. John of Beverley; and if any of them made default in any year, that then he should pay to the community of the town aforesaid for every default 6s. 8d.

Order of the livery of Fullers.

Also, Tuesday before S. Mark's day, A.D. 1396, John Bole [and ten others] came before the twelve keepers and of their own free will granted that each of them would be clothed in a like suit in honour of S. John of Beverley, viz. every year on Ascension Day; and they asked the said keepers, that if any of them henceforth should be found rebelling against his fellows, that then he should pay to the community of the town of Beverley for every offence 3s. 4d., and for the repair of the Fullers' castle 3s. 4d.

Penalty for abusing his brethren.

Afterwards, 27 May, A.D. 1410, it was ordered that if John Nowre, junior, abused William Farrant, Alderman of the Fullers, in the execution of his office, he should pay to the use of the community 3s. 4d.; and that he and everyone else of the craft aforesaid who abused the Alderman or steward for the future should incur the penalty aforesaid, to be paid without delay.

ancient custom of the town of Beverley, to play in honour of the Body of Christ, under the penalty for every craft making default, of 40s.

Order for playing the same Corpus Christi Play for ever.

Also, 8 April, A.D. 1411, to the praise and honour of God and of the Body of Christ, and for the peaceful union of the worthier and lesser commons of the town of Beverley, there was a short conference held between William Rolleston, merchant, Nicholas of Rise, Adam Tirwhitt, John of Holme, William Wilton, Adam Barker, and others, worshipful men of the worthier sort, not having liveries every year like others of the other crafts of Beverley, and not playing in other plays, that the worthier sort should, though they have not hitherto been accustomed do so, erect at their cost, maintain and cause to be played, in honourable and becoming wise, a pageant at the feast of Corpus Christi. Whereupon the said worthier sort for themselves and others of the worthier sort, as much as in them lay, submitted themselves to the award and judgment of Richard Aglyon, Thomas Coppandale sen., William Dalton, William Melbourne, and their fellows, the twelve keepers of the community of the town of Beverley.

Which twelve keepers gave judgment in this form, that the said worthier sort at the feast of Corpus Christi next, this present year, through four of them and under the supervision of the twelve keepers of the community for the time being at the costs and expense of the said worthier sort shall cause to be made a fit and proper stage, and a proper play to be played on the same, under penalty of 40s. to be levied on the said worthier sort to the use of the community aforesaid.

And further that the honour of God and the reputation of the town of Beverley may be exalted with greater devotion and repute, most of the aldermen and stewards of the crafts in Beverley, viz. mercers, clothworkers, tanners, weavers, tailors, shoemakers, watermen, dyers, fullers, saddlers, bakers, butchers, smiths, skinnners, and others, for themselves and their crafts and for the whole community, so far as in them is, submitted themselves to the award of the aforesaid twelve keepers, as well in respect of the erection of castles as for the maintenance of the Corpus Christi Play.

Whereon the aforesaid keepers thus gave their award: that all and singular of every craft, who were accustomed to have and set up wooden castles in honour of God and of S. John of Beverley, or in future shall have them, shall henceforth for ever set up and cover them in an ornamental fashion, under a penalty of 6s. 8d., to be Governance of the procession on Corpus Christi day.

Dissension having arisen between the aldermen and stewards of divers crafts as to the carrying of wax lights or torches yearly heretofore in the procession of the revered feast of Corpus Christi.

Therefore by the assent and consent of the aldermen and stewards of all the crafts underwritten, and of others assembled in the Gild Hall, in the time of Thomas Mayne, John Bewholme [etc.], and their fellows the twelve keepers or governors of the town of Beverley, 19 March, A.D. 1490, and in the 9th year of King Henry, the Sixth after the conquest of England, it was ordered, and decreed to be perpetually observed, that every year in future on Corpus Christi day the stewards of each craft underwritten shall pass with their light in the said procession in their order in the form underwritten, and no one else of their craft with them, under the penalty below stated ; but yearly in future with their aldermen shall hold, keep, and behave themselves in honourable and decent wise behind the most holy Body of Christ, as the solemnity of the aforementioned feast demands. And every man of the underwritten crafts who is found disobedient to this order shall forfeit to the community 40s. without any pardon.

Penalty paid by the Smiths for not playing their play on Corpus Christi day.

Because Thomas Lorymer, Robert Marshall, John Lorymer by the Cuckstoolpit, John Lorymer over the Smiths' Row and their fellows failed in their play on Corpus Christi day, A.D. 1392; therefore it was held by John Kelk, Stephen Coppandale, Richard Aglyon and their fellows, keepers of the town of Beverley, that they pay to the community of the town of Beverley 40s., as was ordered by the whole community in ancient times. And thereupon, on Friday after 15 July in the year aforesaid came Thomas Lorymer, John Lorymer by the Cuckstoolpit, John Locksmith, Thomas Locksmith, as well for themselves as for their fellows, and offered to the twelve keepers 40s. which they had forfeited.

And because they behaved obediently, therefore the said 40s. were handed back to the said Thomas Lorymer and his fellows aforesaid; on this condition, that if the said Thomas or his fellows made default in their play, viz. the Ascension of the Lord, on any Corpus Christi day on which the other craftsmen of Beverley play, that then without delay they ought to pay to the community 100s.

And for the due and faithful performance of this agreement, the said Thomas Lorymer and his fellows above written bind themselves and each of them for himself to the said keepers and their successors in 100s., to be paid within twelve days after they shall have made default in their play aforesaid.

end. The rest are of a later date and in no particular order, either as to subject or date.

And so the Mayor aforesaid ordered his bailiffs to cause to be returned and redelivered all the distresses which they had taken of burgesses of Beverley for toll.

This was done and spoken in the church of the Blessed Peter of York, in the Chapter-house.

Order of tailors as to expenses of Corpus Christi pageant and play, with penalty.

Also, A.D. 1377, they consented in the Gild Hall that all tailors of Beverley should appear in person at the making of their account of the expenses of the stage of the Corpus Christi Play, and on the castle and feast on Monday in Rogation days; and that any tailor who is poor and does not wear the suit of the brethren of the craft shall contribute to the expenses of the castle only; and anyone rebelling in this matter shall pay for the paving of the town 12d.

Order as to overseers of the craft of saddlers.

Also, Friday next before S. Mary Magdalen's day (22 July), A.D. 1405, it was ordered by John Langthorne, John Hatheron, John Fuystour, William Jervis, Gilbert Saddler, John of Binde, Simon Saddler, and John Paulyn, that they shall have two overseers of their craft to see the defaults of the same, if any is found guilty in his craft aforesaid, and to present all defaults as often as may be necessary to the twelve keepers of the town of Beverley, for the time being; and for every default to pay to the use of the community 8s. 4d., and for the use of the craft 8s. 4d.

Of common in the roads, with penalty.

Also, Stephen Gembling impounded sheep of Thomas Bedford, burgess of Beverley, in a lane by the side of the king's highway leading from the hermitage towards Bishopburton, A.D. 1407, in the common of the community of the town of Beverley, in contempt and to the grave damage of the community: therefore he placed himself at mercy under the surety of Thomas Gembling; whereon judgment was given that the said Stephen should pay to the community 12d. and no more, because by the award of four arbitrators he had made satisfaction to Thomas Bedford for the said unlawful impounding to the amount of 5s.

[Order against a promoter of litigation.]

On S. Mark's day, A.D. 1429, public complaint having been made in the Gild Hall by very many of the burgesses of the same town, that William Payns is a sower of dissension and discord and a promoter of unrighteous lawsuits among many of the community aforesaid, though he is wholly ignorant of law, to the great damage and loss of the community aforesaid, and the loss of the goods of many :

Therefore, by the common assent of the community, it was ordered that no burgess of the community aforesaid shall retain or hire the said William Payns in any plea or cause to be henceforth begun in any court within the liberty aforesaid ; and if any burgess presume to do so he shall lose the freedom of his burgess-ship forthwith.

For the common average.

Also, it was ordered and decreed by the assent of the community aforesaid, on the day and year abovesaid, that if a burgess hold a close or croft within the liberty aforesaid, in which any burgesses of Beverley have or ought to have their common, in English, common average, after the hay or corn has been mown, put together and carried away, and prevent any burgess of the community aforesaid from fully having his said common, or favour or support any lord, from whom he holds, against any burgess in any plea or suit afterwards begun for such common, he shall forthwith lose the freedom of his burgess-ship.

N.B.—Penalty on a burgess absent at the election of the twelve governors on S. Mark's day without reasonable cause.

S. Mark's day, A.D. 1435, it was ordered and decreed, for perpetual observance, by the common consent and assent of the community of the town of Beverley, assembled together in the Gild Hall, that every burgess of the town aforesaid who shall not come on any S. Mark's day in future to the Gild Hall at the election of the twelve keepers there by the community when the common bell stops, viz. at 8 A.M., after being summoned the day before by the common bellman, but is absent from the said election, such burgess so found guilty shall every

Of common average.

Tuesday, 28 May, A.D. 1434, in the presence of all the worshipful men of the whole town of Beverley under-named, assembled in the Gild Hall, and by the assent and consent of the same, and of the other fellow-burgesses then there present, it was ordered and decreed that the twelve governors of the town of Beverley for the time being shall have power during the term of three years next following and fully to be ended, to let the common average for divers sums of money according to their discretion, and to apply the money so to be received for the building of a new hall on the Dings. And any burgess of the said town who shall presume to attempt anything against the said order during the term aforesaid shall lose the freedom of his burgess-ship for the term aforesaid.

Note: Of the loss of burgess-ship.

Also, it was ordered and agreed by the said worshipful persons underwritten and by the assent of the council there on the said day and year, that any burgess of Beverley who shall henceforth be found disobedient and rebellious against any order made by the twelve keepers of the town of Beverley for the benefit and advantage of the community aforesaid, and shall have disobeyed such order, is thenceforth discharged of his freedom aforesaid for ever without remission.

Note: Common Average.

Be it remembered that, Friday, 12 August, A.D. 1435, it was ordered by Thomas Wilton, William Cockerell, Roger Cokerham and their fellows, the twelve governors of the community of the town of Beverley, with the assent of the burgesses, also of the aldermen and stewards of the town aforesaid assembled in the Gild Hall there, that an order lately made by Thomas Mayne and his fellows, late keepers of the town aforesaid, with the assent of divers fellow-burgesses of the town aforesaid, A.D. 1484, as to letting the common average for a term of three years for the building of a new hall on the Dings as appears above in the Register, shall be of none effect and void.

Also, it was ordered that no burgess of the town of Beverley shall put any animals in any place or close where the said burgess ought to have the common average, after the hay has been made, before the Nativity of the Blessed Mary the Virgin (8 September) following.

Also, it was ordered the said day and year that the said burgesses may put and have their geld beasts in three crofts only; viz. from the north side of Swinemoorgate to the king's highway by Spaycrosse there leading to the town of Hullbridge, and that any burgesses of the town aforesaid who have put any animals in the common average before this order shall be quit of that trespass.

Also, it was ordered that no burgess shall put more beasts in the common average after the said Nativity of the Blessed Mary than he has and is accustomed to have in Figham or Swinemoor.

Also, it was ordered that no burgess of the town aforesaid shall put any sheep in the common average aforesaid in the future; and if any of the said coburgesses shall presume to attempt anything against these orders or any of them, that then he shall be punished by the discretion of the twelve governors of the town aforesaid for the time being, as often as any of the said coburgesses shall have been convicted of the same for the future.

Malicious words against the Twelve.

The twelve keepers or governors of the town of Beverley by William Kelk, their attorney, offered themselves against John Howell in an action of debt.

And they say that where, among other liberties and free customs held in the town of Beverley and used from time immemorial, it has been the custom that every burgess of the town aforesaid, who refuses to be governed by the twelve governors or keepers of the town aforesaid for the time being, for any offence laid on him according to the form of law of lawful burgage, or makes any resistance against the aforesaid governors or keepers of the town aforesaid, or says any words aut aliqua verba maliciose et fraudulenter de predictis Gubernatoribus sive Custodibus, et eorum gubernacione ville predictae, absque causa vera alicui dixerit, quod tunc dictus burgensis solvet Communitati dicte ville xls., tociens quociens ipsum sic delinquere contigerit. Ac etiam solvet domino Regi xⁱⁱ, tociens quociens ipsum sic delinquere contigerit.

Predictus tamen Johannes Howell, maliciose et sine causa rationabili, die Veneris, xxviiij die mensis Octobris anno regni Henrici Sexti xiiij^{mo}, infra libertatem &c. et aliis temporibus &c. dicebat et affirmabat magistro Johanni Marschall et aliis personis, quod dicti Gubernatores sive Custodes tenuerunt et habuerunt apud Beverlacum coram eis placita tam curiam spiritualem quam temporalem domini Archiepiscopi Eboracensis tangencia et concernencia, ubi dicti querentes aliqua talia placita non tenuerunt nec habuerunt. Et super hoc dictus Johannes Howell dictos xls. dictis Gubernatoribus sive Custodibus solvendo licet sepius requisitus non solvit, set adhuc solvere contradicit. Unde dicunt quod deteriorati sunt et dampnum habent ad valenciam xxs. Et inde producant sectam. Et dictus Johannes Howell in propria persona venit et defendit et petit licenciam ad interloquendum quia non habet consilium. Et habet licenciam usque diem Lune proximum ante festum Sancti Petri in Cathedra, &c. Ad quem diem predicti querentes comparuerunt per attornatum suum predictum Et dictus defendens habet licenciam ad interloquendum usque diem Lune in prima septimana Quadragesime proxime future.

1435. Duodecim Custodes sive Gubernatores ville Beverlaci per [blank in MS.] Dawkyn attornatum suum optulerunt se versus Johannem Whetley de Beverlaco Taylour, in placito debiti; Unde dicunt quod cum inter ceteras libertates et liberas consuetudines infra villam Beverlaci habitas et a tempore quo non extat memoria usitatas, usitatum sit quod quicumque burgensis ville predictae, qui per xij Gubernatores sive Custodes ville predictae pro tempore existentes et pro delicto sibi imposito secundum formam legalis burgagii gubernari recusaverit, aut prefatis Gubernatoribus sive Custodibus aliquam resistenciam de gubernacione ville predictae fecerit, aut aliqua verba contumeliosa et inobediencia prefatis Gubernatoribus dixerit, quod tunc predictus burgensis solvet dictis Custodibus sic pro tempore existentibus xls. tociens quociens ipsum sic delinquere contigerit ac etiam solvet domino Regi pro tempore existenti xⁱⁱ tociens quociens ipsum sic delinquere contigerit.

maliciously and fraudulently of the aforesaid governors or keepers in their governance of the town aforesaid without true cause, such burgess shall pay to the community of the said town 40s. for every such offence; and shall also pay to the lord the King £10 for every such offence.

Nevertheless the said John Howell maliciously and without reasonable cause on Friday, 28 Oct. 14 Henry VI., within the liberty &c., and at other times &c. said and affirmed to Mr. John Marshall and other persons that the said governors or keepers held and had at Beverley before them pleas as well touching and concerning the spiritual as the temporal court of the Lord Archbishop of York, whereas the said plaintiffs never held or had any such pleas. And thereupon the said John Howell, though often called on to do so, never paid the said 40s. to the said governors or keepers, but still refuses to pay them; whereby they say they are aggrieved and have damages to the value of 20s., and thereon they bring suit. And the said John Howell in his own person came and defended and asks leave to imparle, as he has no counsel; and has leave to Monday next before 22 February, at which day the plaintiffs aforesaid appeared by their attorney aforesaid, and the said defendant has leave to imparle until Monday in the first week in Lent next.

Resistance to the Twelve.

The twelve keepers or governors of the town of Beverley by [blank] Dawkins their attorney, offered themselves against John Wheatley of Beverley, tailor, in an action of debt. And they say that [as in last extract down to 'for every such offence'].

Predictus tamen Johannes Whetley coram prefatis Gubernatoribus apud Beverlacum in Gilda Aula ibidem personaliter comparens die Veneris, primo die Junii anno regni Henrici Sexti xiiij^{mo}, diversa verba contumeliosa et inobediencia prefatis Gubernatoribus ibidem dixit, et per eosdem Gubernatores ibidem gubernari, ac cuidam ordinacioni per totam Communitatem die Sancti Marci ultimo preterito facte de diversis Articulis arti Cissorum concernentibus per ipsos Gubernatores in melius reformandos obedire recusavit. But the aforesaid John Wheatley appearing in person before the aforesaid governors at Beverley in the Gild Hall there on Friday, 1 June, 14 Henry VI., said divers insulting and disobedient words to the aforesaid governors, and refused to be governed by the same governors or to obey an order made by the whole community on S. Mark's day last past of divers articles touching the craft of tailors to be reformed : by the same governors.

Wherefore they say they are the worse and have damages to the value of 20s., and so they bring suit.

[Of the preservation of the liberty of the town.]

It was ordered and granted on 7 May, A.D. 1456, by Roger Rolleston, Mr. William Hardyng, William Hundsworth, John Ashton, Robert Thompson, Henry Pollington, John Wilkinson, and their fellows, keepers or governors of the said town of Beverley in the Gild Hall then present, and by the worshipful and discreet men whose names are underwritten, that the aforesaid Roger and his fellows aforesaid and the said worshipful men will be favourable and assisting and contribute to scot and lot, for the preservation of the liberty of the said town in the future, as appears by an indenture thereof made.

The undernamed agreed to the above on the day and year aforesaid.

Of the contributions of the crafts, and election of keepers.

Be it remembered that on S. common burgesses of the said town in the aforesaid Gild Hall ask that the election of the twelve governors or keepers of the aforesaid town may be yearly held on the said 25 April out of eighteen of the better and more worthy burgesses of the aforesaid town according to the tenor and effect of their Magna Carta as has been anciently accustomed.

The undernamed consented to the premises the day and year aforesaid, viz. for playing the play, rendering accounts, and keeping the election of the twelve governors or keepers of the town aforesaid on every S. Mark's day as is before written in the same form for ever.

Some orders.

On S. Mark's day 1460, at the special request of the community, it was ordered that the keepers or governors of the year last past should render account before 24 June next to come, or within a fortnight following on pain of forfeiture, to be paid to the said community forthwith, of 10*l.*; and so every year the account should be rendered under the penalty aforesaid.

Also, it was ordered the same day that every alderman or steward of every craft has to be present on the account day, if they wish, when they have had notice from the common sergeant of the town.

Also, it was ordered that every person of every craft of the town, being a brother of the same craft, should be a burgess from the day of the making of this order, under penalty of 40*s.* to be paid to the community.

Also, it was ordered and decreed that no sanctuary man of the same town should be a burgess, though he had the king's charter, for the future, &c. And that if anyone is indicted of felony he shall not have his freedom before he has been cleared of the said felony.

THESE ARE NEW ORDERS.

Orders and statutes made and published by Thomas Menskip (&c.) the twelve keepers or governors of the town of Beverley, with the consent and assent of all the good burgesses of the town aforesaid, and all the aldermen and stewards of every craft and mystery of the town aforesaid, for the reformation of certain abuses of contributions and unlawful customs used among the burgesses and inhabitants of the town aforesaid, and for the common advantage and necessary benefit of the whole community of the town aforesaid, A.D. 1467, as is more fully contained in the following.

And first it was decreed and ordered that if anyone of whatsoever estate, degree or condition he may be, wish to live in the town of Beverley, he may freely come to live, dwell, and occupy his mystery or craft as a master in the town aforesaid, without any exaction or contribution of money to be paid to the community of the town aforesaid, or anyone else of his mystery or craft, for the first year of his coming to the town aforesaid, except only to the laudable and necessary expenses of the castle and light of his mystery or craft and the play, if any is ordered by the governors of the town aforesaid for that year, as a master of his mystery or craft, and shall not be further charged for the first year.

But after the first year of his coming to the town aforesaid, as long as he stay there and set up open shop and ply his craft, and is not a burgess, he shall thenceforth pay and contribute, until he is made a burgess, to the community of the town aforesaid 12d. yearly, and to the alderman of his mystery or craft 12d., besides the charges of expenses of castle, light and play of his mystery or craft, yearly falling on him as a master.

But others, wage-receivers or hired men, called journeymen, shall observe the decrees and orders made about them, as is noted in the orders of the burgesses of every mystery and craft in the town aforesaid in their respective places.

Item ordinatum est atque statutum, quod si quis alicujus artis vel sciencie, non burgensis predictæ ville, recipi debeat in magistrum

Also, it was decreed and ordered that the aforesaid twelve keepers or governors of the town of Beverley, now and for the time being hereafter for ever, shall henceforth be called and named by the burgesses of the town aforesaid, the aldermen, keepers, or governors of the town of Beverley; and that all proclamations, injunctions and orders for the government of the town aforesaid shall henceforth be made under the names of the twelve aldermen, keepers, or governors of the town of Beverley, for the same town used anciently to be ruled and governed by an alderman.

Also, it was decreed and ordered that whatsoever the twelve aldermen, keepers, or governors of the aforesaid town of Beverley, or seven of the same, as was ordered of old, with the consent of the community of the town, for the advantage and benefit of the same, for the good governance of the inhabitants of the same, have decreed to be ordered and done in the same, shall be observed by the whole community of the town aforesaid without any fraud or deceit whatever. And if any burgess of the town aforesaid shall be a rebel or opponent of the words, deeds and orders of the aforesaid governors, made for the good of the community of the aforesaid town, he shall forfeit a penalty of 40s. to the community of the aforesaid town without any pardon.

Also, it was decreed and ordered that the burgesses of the aforesaid town shall hold their meetings or assemblies in the houses of their brethren or other places, and not come in crowds to the Gild Hall, unless they shall be summoned by the aforesaid governors for some cause concerning the good government of the aforesaid town, under penalty of 20s. to be paid the aforesaid community by everyone so offending as often as he shall be found guilty.

Also, it was ordered and decreed that if any inhabitant of the aforesaid town, burgess or not burgess, of whatever mystery or craft he be, being present at the taxation and allowance of the expenses of the castle, light and play of his mystery or craft, is doubtful of the true assessment and settlement of such expenses, and feels himself aggrieved thereby, if he wishes to complain thereof to the governors of the aforesaid town, then the governors shall inquire and examine into the truth and shall give judgment as they shall find best.

Also, it was ordered and decreed that if anyone of any craft or mystery, not a burgess of the aforesaid town, ought to be received as a master or brother of his craft or mystery, he shall first, before his reception, be presented by the alderman and stewards of his craft or mystery to the governors of the aforesaid town for the time being, who shall take from him an oath of fealty to the community of the aforesaid town, and that he will faithfully observe all the statutes and orders of his craft or mystery, so far as they concern him ; on pain of forfeiture of 10s. by the said alderman and stewards, if they have not done so, to be paid to the said community without any pardon.

Item ordinatum est, quod si quis Carpentarius aut Tegulator, viz. Tilethakkerr, Tilewaller et Plasterer, occupare voluerit in arte sua infra villam Beverlaci, non habens apprenticium habilem ad sibi serviendum ac secum operandum, alium operarium in servitorem suum, nec conducticium, vocatum journeyman, seu operarium cum ipso non ducet ad operandum, sine speciali mandato et licencia domini operis cum quo operabitur; Ita quod semper licebit domino operis, quocienscumque et quandocumque sibi visum fuerit, magistrum vel servum conducticium seu operarium in opus suum assumere et conducere, et si oporteat, suum opus per unum inceptum per alium vel alios consummari et finiri facere; predictusque Carpentarius vel Tegulator de stipendio alicujus stipendiarii sive operarii secum

Also, it was ordered and decreed that when and as often as any of the forty-eight burgesses of the aforesaid town, who has formerly been one of the governors of the aforesaid town, is summoned and has notice by the direction of the governors of the aforesaid town for the time being, to come to the Gild Hall aforesaid for causes and business concerning the advantage and benefit of the community, does not come at the hour and day assigned in the notice, he shall forfeit to the use of the community aforesaid 6d., unless he shall be able to offer a reasonable excuse, and send the same to the governors aforesaid on the same day at the Gild Hall beforesaid.

Also, it was decreed and ordered that the burgesses of the town beforesaid who are at variance and at law for any matter shall be brought to agreement, as far as may be, before the governors of the aforesaid town by the same. And the burgesses so at variance shall observe and fulfil the judgment and award of the same governors in every matter at variance unless it be for some debt ; for which the aforesaid governors shall not give nor make any delay or day for payment, except with the consent of both the parties at variance.

Also, it was ordered that if a carpenter or tiler, viz. a roof-tiler, bricklayer or plasterer, wish to ply his craft in the town of Beverley, not having an apprentice fit to be his man and work with him, he shall not bring another working man as his servant or hired man called journeyman, or as a workman with him, to work, without the special order and leave of the employer with whom he is to work ; So that the employer may, when and as often as he likes, take and hire a master or hired man to do his work ; and if necessary may get his work begun by one and completed and finished by another or others ; and the aforesaid carpenter or bricklayer shall take no part of the wages of any hired labourer working with him under penalty of De portitoribus et cariatoribus.

Item ordinatum est quod si quis cariator portitor vel creler predictæ ville demandatus fuerit seu premunitus per aliquem burgensem predictæ ville ad cariandum merchandizas, seu alias res et bona qualitercumque fuerint ejusdem burgensis, eidem burgensi primo serviet in cariagio hujusmodi, nisi prius in cariagio alterius burgensis predictæ ville occupatus fuerit; et extunc post cariagium factum cum priore burgense, cum secundo cariaabit, et a cariagio suo [non] recedet donec totum cariagium ejusdem burgensis compleverit: quod si facere presumpserit vjs. viijd. Communitati predictæ ville persolvat, tociens quociens hoc probabiliter gubernatoribus predictæ ville in Gilda Aula constare poterit.

Pro districcionibus captis.

Preterea ordinatum est quod quandocumque et quocienscumque placuerit custodibus predictæ ville distringere burgensem ipsius ville per bona et catalla sua, pro aliquo debito predictæ Communitatis, et idem burgensis districciones suas hujusmodo infra octo septimanas post capcionem eorundem redimere et exsolvere noluerit, quod tunc bene licebit custodibus memorate ville pro tempore existentibus predictas districciones appreciari facere in Gilda Aula predictæ ville, et eas ibidem vendicioni exponere. Proviso semper quod totum et quicquid superfuerit ultra debitum predictæ Communitatis de districcionibus supradictis proprietario earundem restituetur et restauretur.

Pro le communi beke.

Item ordinatum est quod nullus aliquas naves batillas seu caches super ripas magni torrentis Beverlaci infra bundas de Guchmerlane et parsonbrig, sine licencia speciali Custodum predictæ, fieri seu reparari faciat, sub pena forisfacture xx^d solidorum ad usum Communitatis ville antedictæ.

the community of the aforesaid town, as often as he shall have been found guilty in that behalf before the governors of the aforesaid town.

Moreover it was ordered that no barber or chandler in the town aforesaid shall put any resin in images, wax-tapers and wax candles for sale, or any wise follow their craft in deceit of the people, under penalty of forfeiture of 20s. to be paid to the community of the aforesaid town by every one offending in that behalf.

Of porters and creelers.

Also, it was ordered that if any carrier, porter, or creeler of the aforesaid town shall be ordered, or have notice given him, by any burgess of the aforesaid town to carry merchandise or other things and goods of any kind belonging to the same burgess, he shall serve the same burgess first in such carrying, unless he shall have been before employed in carrying for another burgess of the aforesaid town, and then, after finishing his carrying for the first burgess he shall carry for the second, and not depart from carrying until he has finished all the carriage for the same burgess; and if he presume to do so he shall pay 6s. 8d. to the community aforesaid, as often as this shall be established with reasonable certainty before the Governors in the Gild Hall.

As to distresses taken.

Moreover it was ordered that whenever and as often as the keepers of the aforesaid town may please to distrain a burgess of the same town by his goods and chattels for any debt due to the aforesaid community, and the same burgess shall not be willing to redeem and pay such distresses within eight weeks after the taking of them, that then it shall be lawful for the keepers of the said town for the time being to cause the said distresses to be valued in the Gild Hall of the aforesaid town, and put them up for sale there. Provided always that all the surplus of the said distresses beyond the debt due to the aforesaid community shall be restored to their owner.

For the common beck.

Also, it was ordered that no one shall have ships, boats, or ketches made or repaired on the banks of the Great Beck of Beverley within the boundaries of Guchmerelane and Parson's Bridge, under penalty of forfeiture of 20s. to the use of the community of the town before said.

Pro piscatoribus.

Item ordinatum est quod omnes piscarii viz. panzaremen introducetes pisces in villam predictam non cariabunt ipsos pisces ex deinde villam ad vendendum donec prius de eisdem inhabitantibus prefate ville ipsos emere volentibus debite serviatur, sine speciali licencia dictorum Custodum, sub pena vjs. viijd. solvendorum Communitati supradicte; Et quod ipsi piscarii sub eadem pena omnes suos [pisces] publico in foro et non in domibus suis aut aliis locis privatis vendicioni exponant quovismodo.

Past keepers not to be presented to be constables.

Item, ordinatum est quod burgenses predictae ville non presentent illos, qui perantea fuerunt Custodes sive Gubernatores predictae ville ad officium constabulariorum in Aula domini Archiepiscopi, sub pena vjs. viijd. solvendorum usui Communitatis ville supradicte.

Pro thorale edificando.

Item salubriter ordinatum est quod proper fetorem et aeris intemperiem ad destruccionem fructuum arborum, aliaque incommoda, que ex inde provenire poterit, nullus edificare presumat decetero aliquod thorale pro cremacione tegularum infra predictam villam Beverlaci, aut propius eandem villam quam thoralia tegularum edificata existunt in presenti, sub pena centum solidorum applicandorum et solvendorum usui Communitatis ville antedicte.

For fishermen.

Also, it was ordered that all fishermen, viz. basketmen, bringing fish to the town aforesaid shall not carry their fish out of the town to sell, until those of the same inhabitants of the said town who want to buy have been duly served, except with the special leave of the said keepers, under penalty of 6s. 8d. to be paid to the community abovementioned, and that the same fishermen under the same penalty set out their fish for sale publicly in the market and not in their houses or other private places.

Also it was ordered that the burgesses of the aforesaid town shall not present those who have formerly been keepers or governors of the aforesaid town to the office of constables in the Hall of the Lord Archbishop, under penalty of 6s. 8d. to be paid to the use of the community of the town abovementioned.

Of building a brick kiln.

Also, it was wholesomely ordered, on account of the stink and badness of the air to the destruction of fruit trees and other disadvantages which may arise therefrom, that no one henceforth dare to build any kiln for burning bricks in the aforesaid town of Beverley, or nearer the same town than brick-kilns are now built, under penalty of 100s., to be applied and paid to the use of the community of the town aforesaid.

LORD OF BEVERLEY, AND THE BURGESSES OF BEVERLEY.]

1536. The Indenture made the fivethe day of Novembre in the xxviiij^h yere of the reign of oure sovereign Lorde Kyng Henry the viijth, betwene the most reverende Fadre in God Edwarde, Archbushoppe of the metropolitane churche of Yorke, and chyef lord of the towne and burghes of Beverley within the Countie of York, of the tone partye, and Robert Creke, esquier, John Wright, gent, Robert Raffulls, Robert Gray and odre the burgesses of the said towne of Beverley, on the toodre partie

Witnessethe that the said parties are agreeede in forme followynge, that is to say :

Where the said most reverende Father in God, and othere his predecessours, Archbushoppes of the said churche of Yorke, as well by reason of diverse and soundrie grauntes made unto them by diverse of the kynges most noble progenitours, kynges of England, as otherwise, hathe, had and ought to have, and also tyme ougt of mynde of man have used to keepe and have within the said towne of Beverley his or theer Courte called the Shirefes torne, or Court leete, and also by the same tyme have had used and ought to have all defaultes offences and othere thinges inquirable in the Shirefes torne, or Court Leete, to be enquired and presented in their said courte, called the Shirefes torne or leete within the said towne of Beverlaie ; and also all the fynes amerciaments and oodre profetts commeng, arisenge, and groweng, by reason of any presentments made or founde within the said courte, to there owne use, as unto their good right in that behalf was and is requisite and doothe apperteigne.

And in liekewyse the said most reverend Father in God and his predecessours, by reason of lieke graunte made unto diverse his predecessours by diverse of the said progenitours of our said soveraigne Lord, hathe had, and also now hathe, autoritie to make depute and ordeigne the clerke of the markett within the said towne of Beverlaie, and also by reason of the said graunts have had, and oughte to have, all fynes merciaments and oodre profetts, which by reason of the said office of the clerke of the market have comen and growne, or oughte to com and growe, within the said towne of Beverlaie.

And in likewise the said most reverend Father in God, and his predecessours, have had and also hathe autoritie by lieke graunts as is aforesaid to make justices of peax within the said towne of Beverley; whiche justices of the peax, so made, have had, and also hathe, full autoritie and power to enquire, here and determyne all and everie suche thinges as ar, and oughte to be enquired, hard or determynd before anye justice of the peax made by the kynge, our soveraigne Lord, or anye his most noble progenitours, in anye partie within his realme.

And also the said most reverend Fadre in God and his predecessours Archbushoppes of Yorke have had and used to have all isshues, fynes, amerciaments and profetts wiche by reason of anye enquirie, presentment or ordinaunce before or by the said justices of the peax, hathe beene, or shuld fortune to be, deemed, adjudged, ceased,¹ forfeited or decreed.

And that the foresaide burgesses ne anye of them, ne anye oodre parson or parsons, have not, ne ought to have, anye autoritie or power to medle with anye thing pertaineng to the said most reverend Father in God by reason of his said justices of peax, shireves turne, or clerke of the market; and not to intromitt or medle with anye fynes, forfeitures, amerciaments, issues or profetts, wiche hathe, or shold fortune to be, assessed within the said towne of Beverlaie, by reason of anye offence or misdemeanour, wiche ought to be inquired or presented before the said justices of peax, or in the said court called the Shirefe his turne, or lete, or that shold belong to the saide office of the clerkshippe of the market by any meanes.

Yet notwithstanding the said most reverend Father, willeng thencrease and avauncement of good ordre and rule to be kepte within the said towne of Beverlaie, and the commenweale of the same, and for the tendre love and zeale that he beareth to the same, hathe covenanted, graunted and agreed, and by thes presents, for hym and his successours, covenanthe and agreeth to and withe the said Robert Creeke, John Wright, Robert Raffulls, Robert Graye, and oother the burgesses of the said town, and their successours, that the said burgesses and ther successours, burgesses of the said towne of Beverlaie, shall from hensforthe have their free eleccion and nomination of thyrtye and sixe persons to bee of the comen cownsaile of the said town ; And yff yt fortune anye of the said xxxvj persons elected and chosen to bee of the said cownsaile to dye, or, by his or their demeretts, to be putt owt or amoved from the said cownsaile by his fellowes of the said cownsaile, that than the xij Governours of the said towne for the tyme beeing, with the residue of the said xxxvj of the said cownsaile remayneng, shall within xl days next after suche rowme soo beeing voyde, nomynate ij of the most honest and substanciall persons, burgesses of the said towne, wiche be of vesture and castell, and none oother, to the comynaltie of the burgesses of the said towne, to thentent that the said cominaltie may choose one of the said persones so named to the rome of suche burgesses as be before departed, or put owt, from the said rome as is beforsaid ; And that the said person so chosen shalbe sworne after the custome of the said towne ; and yf anye person chosen as ys beforsaid doo refuse to bee sworne, or to take the rome upon hym, that than the person soo refusyng shall forfayte the some of xls., the same to be levied of his goodes and catailes, and to bee employde to the use and profett of the said towne ; and than in lyeke maner the said burgesses to procede to the leccion of an oother person to the said rome.

And for a more quiet and peaxable election to bee had in the said towne, it is covenanted, graunted and agreeede betwene the said parties that yerelie, in the day of the feast of Saincte Marke, in the place accustomed and used, everie aldremen of everie occupacion and craft within the said towne shall call their occupacions togidres, and than and there enquier, and serche and trie the voixes of everie man in their occupacions, wiche xij of the xxiiij cownsaillours or assistants they woll choose to be the xij Governours for the yere followinge ; and that then everie parson of the said nombre as shall have the most voixes, with the voixes of thaldremen of the occupacions, shalbee presented by thaldremen of everie occupacion unto the xij Governours than beeing in weyteng ; fyrst to bee writen the name of the aldremen and of thoccupacion wherof he is aldremen, and the names also of suche persones as they or the more part of them hathe chosen ; and than, the said xij Governours, gathereng the voixes of all the said occupacions togideres, shall choose and take for Governours suche persons for the yere foloweng as hathe the most voixes of all the said occupacions. And that everie aldremen afre the forme aforsaid shall orderelie, trulie and peaxable, trie and present the voixes of their said occupacions, upon payne everie of the said aldremen and his occupacion to lose vjs. viijd. for everie tyme they shall doo the contrarie, the same to be levied and employde to thuse of the said towne.

And that the xij Governours of the yere precedent shall yerelie make there accompt unto the xij Governours for the yere foloweng, and to thaldremen and their bredren of the said towne, at the tyme auncientlie used and accustomed in the said towne.

And for the more worshippe of the said election everie aldremen and everie oother person, of everie of thoccupacions of the said towne, shall, at the tyme of the said election, com unto the place accustomed therfore, in the clotheng of their craft, or other their best arraye; and that no person, upon payne of twentie shillengs to bee levied and taken of his goodes and catailes by the said xij Governours to thuse of the said towne, within iij daies aftre everie of the said elections doo com or entre into the comen place of election of the said towne called thanshouse,¹ or the court or garthe of the same house, at the tyme of thelection of the said Governours, with any sworde, dager, wodknif or anye odre wapon defensive or invasive; And also, if anye person or persones offendeng or dooeng contrarie to thordinaunce afforsaide, doo refuse to paye the said sum of xxs., forfeited as is afforsaid, within iij daies next after the said election, or have secured, procured or moved anye businesse or disturbaunce in anye election agaynst the good ordre, peaxe or tranquillitie of the said towne, or hereaftre doo attempt anye thing contrarie to this good ordre or agreement; or be disobedient and not agreable to such good ordres and ordinaunces as is made for the good rule and quietnesse of the said towne, or bee become a mayntaignour of quarells or a sower of dissencion or discorde within the said towne, and so proved and tried before the xij Governours of the said towne for the tyme beeing, he shall forfait and lose his burgaige, without hope of restitution to the same for ever.

And further it is covenanted, graunted, ordred and agreed between the said parties that ij bredren germaignes, that is twoo bredren, othere of one father or one mother, or of bothe father and mother, or ij brether in the lawe, shall not be of the nombre of xij Governours togidres in oone yere; And if it fortune anye suche twoo bredren to bee hereaftre, eithre in the nombre of the xxxvj cownsaillours or assistants, or of the burgesses of the cominaltie, that all ther voices in everie election shalbee accompted but as oone voixe, and no more to all intents.

And further it is ordred between the said parties that no burgesse that nowe is reteigned, or that hereaftre shalbee reteigned, of housholde, liverie, cognizanse or anye other wiese with anye spirituall or temporall lord, or with anye other spirituall or temporall person, shalbee anye of the said nowmbre of xxxvj; And that all men beeing burgesses of the said towne shall have their voixes in the lection of the xij Governours of the said towne; And also that from hensforthe no gentilman dwellyng owt of the said towne shalbee chosen for anye of the xij Governours of the same towne.

And further yt ys granted, ordred and agreed betwene the said parties, that if at anye tyme the xij Governours of the said towne for the tyme beeing have nede of cownsaile or assistaunce in anye weightie causes, odre toocheng the king or tharchbushoppe of Yorke, or the comen weale or damaige of the said towne, that than the saide xij Governours shall and maye call unto them the other xxiiij remaineng of the said nombre of xxxvj, and require and have of them their advise, cownsaile and helpe, concerneng the premisses; and if thes xxxvj, beeing nowe togidres thinke convenient, than maye they call unto them the hole cominaltie of the burgesses; ooderwiese at anye tyme they shall not.

And ferther the said Lord Archbushoppe grauntethe and agreeethe by thies presents to and with the said Robert Creke, John Wright, Robert Raffulls, Robert Graye and oother the burgesses of the said towne of Beverlaie, that the xij Governours of the said towne for the tyme being yerelie in the day of Saynt Marke, afre the election of the said xij Governours finished as it is aforesaid, or within v daies next afre the said feast of Saynt Marke, shall among them self electe choose and swore ij of the nowmbre of the said xij, suche as by them shalbee thoought most convenient, to be Kepars of the market in the said towne; and to prayse and sett price of heringes and oodre fyshe and oother vitales brought to that market to bee sold; and that also ij honest persones of everie occupacion within the said towne shall, at the same tyme, bee in liekwiese choosen to serche all false weights and mesures, unlawfull tanned lether, corrupt fleshe and fishe, bred and ale not keping the true assise, or not made holsome for mannes bodie, within the said towne of Beverlaie; And also to serche for all forstallers and regratours of corne and oother thinges brought into the said towne to bee sold; And that all such defaults and offences in the premisses, or anye of them, as by the said serchers, or anye of them, shalbe founde, shalbee presented by the said serchers unto the said xij Governours in the comen place of the said towne; And afre, the said xij Governours, or ij of them, upon their othes shall present the same defaults and offences in to the next lete courte or Shiref his turne of the said Archbushoppe, holden in the said towne of Beverlaie, before his stuard or depute there; and that the fines forfeitures and amerciaments for all such offences and defaults as bee brought in to the Court of the said Archbushoppe as is aforesaid, shalbee assessed by the said stuard of the said Archbushoppe, or his depute, by the consent of ij of the eldest of the xij Governours than beeing present, or one of them, as shalbee thought convenient, after the quantitie of the said offences; And the tone moytie of all suche fines, forfeitures or amerciaments, presented and assessed as is aforesaid, to bee to the said Archbushoppe and his successours; and the toodre moytie therof to bee to the said towne; the same to be levied by thofficer of the said Archbushoppe and the common officer of the said towne.

And it is also covenanted and agreed betwene the said parties that, in case the said Governours doo not, trulie and accordeng to their othe, wiche from tyme to tyme they shall make in this behalf, present in to the said Archbushoppes courte all and everie the said defaults, forfeitures and offences, or doo conceale the same or anye of them, that than the said Governours not presenteng or concealing such defaults or offences, shall forfait unto the said Lord Archbushoppe and his successours the dowble of the tone moytie of the forfeiture and fyne of everie suche offence and default so not presented, or concealed; the same dowble moytie to be levied by tharchbushoppes officer of the goodes and catailes of suche concealours and offenders, within v daies after that anye suche concealment or offence shalbe in the said Archbushoppe courte sufficientlie tried and proved.

And further the said lord Archbushoppe covenanted and graunted by thes presents to the said Robert Creke, John Wright, Robert Raffull, Robert Graye and oodre the burgesses of the said towne of Beverlaie, and their successours, burgesses of the same, that they and their successours for ever shall have the prayse of all suche fewell and vitale as shall come to bee sold in to the Becke called Beverley Becke, or Grovall.

And moreover the said lord Archbushoppe hath graunted to the said burgesses and their successours that the sanctuarie men comeng to the said towne of Beverlaie, occupieng anye craft or misterie their, shall pay unto the upholdeng of castell and clotheng and oother thinges for the upholdeng of the craft or misterie as oother men occupieng the said craft or misterie paye.

GILD ORDINANCES.

ORDERS OF THE MERCHANT GILD OF BEVERLEY.

The orders and statutes of the brotherhood of the Merchant Gild of the town of Beverley were shown in the Gild Hall of Beverley, and viewed and diligently inspected by Edmund Portyngton, Nicholas Brompton [&c.], and their fellows, the twelve keepers or governors of the community of the town of Beverley, 13 May, A.D. 1446. And because they found and felt some difficulties to their consciences and understandings, they ordered the underwritten orders to be registered and for ever observed in the form following on the petition of Roger Cokerham, alderman, Richard Cosyn and John Middleton, stewards of the brotherhood of the Gild aforesaid, also with the assent and consent of William Spencer, Thomas Skipwith [six other names], and their fellows, brethren of the aforesaid Gild, on the day and year aforesaid.

First, it was ordered and decreed to be observed for ever that everyone who newly sets up shop, as a master, in the craft or faculty of the Merchants, Mercers and Drapers of the town of Beverley, and is known to have been an apprentice of the same craft or faculty, shall pay yearly to the common expenses of castle, light and other charges of the brethren of the Gild aforesaid 3s. 4d. as long as he so keeps shop and follows his employment, until he shall be of the livery and clothing of the Gild aforesaid.

And that everyone newly setting up and keeping shop as aforesaid as a master of the craft or faculty aforesaid, who has never been an apprentice in the same craft or faculty, [and is not a brother of the Gild aforesaid], newly setting up and keeping shop, [shall pay yearly to the common expenses 5s., although he is not a brother of the Gild aforesaid] or does not keep such shop, and follows the em-

ORDERS OF MERCHANTS AND MERCERS.

Orders and constitutions of the brotherhood of Merchants and Mercers of the town of Beverley were newly made and decreed by Adam Newcombe [etc.] the twelve Keepers or Governors of the community of the town of Beverley 22 April, A.D. 1494, at the petition and desire of John Siggles Thorn, alderman of the brotherhood aforesaid, also with the assent and consent of Robert White [and ten others named] brethren of the aforesaid brotherhood. Therefore they ordered the underwritten orders to be registered and for ever observed in the following form.

First they ordered and decreed that the aforesaid brethren of the Merchants and Mercers of the town of Beverley shall find a light as anciently founded and used in honour of the Holy Trinity in the chancel in the chapel of the Blessed Mary the Virgin of Beverley.

And also they made orders for the good governance of the same and for the maintenance of the honour of the castle of the Merchants and Mercers yearly erected and set up to the praise of God, and the glorious confessor, S. John of Beverley; also they consented to the following statutes in the form which follows.

They ordered also that every brother of the craft aforesaid who shall be absent on the day of the election of the alderman and stewards, viz. the Sunday after the Ascension of our Lord Jesus Christ, or at any prime gild, or any meeting fixed to be held by the alderman and stewards for the good of the brotherhood or craft, if summoned, shall pay without delay a pound of wax, unless he shall be able to offer a reasonable cause.

And any brother or sister of the said brotherhood who shall

Et si aliquis confrater sive soror dicte confraternitatis in paupertate moriatur, non habens de proprio, unde honeste sepeliri valeat, tunc de expensis et costagiis dicte confraternitatis honeste sepietur.

Quicumque vero juste, propter honorem et bonam gubernacionem predictae artis et castelli, electus fuerit in officium Aldermanni, non propter obprobrium nec derisum, et officium predictum recusaverit, solvet ad opus Communitatis luminis et castelli vjs. viijd., equaliter dividendos. Senescallus qui officium recusaverit solvet ijs. iiijd., in forma predicta dividendos.

Insuper si discordia aliqua mota fuerit inter confratrem et confratrem, tunc ille sciens se gravari, monstrabit suum gravamen Aldermannio et Senescallis, antequam alibi demonstret aut conqueratur, sub pena amissionis xxd. Communitati Beverlaci, et xxd. ad usum luminis.

Quilibet vero confrater qui Aldermannum aut Senescallos injuste aut arrogancie [sic] reprobaverit, causa malicie seu malivole, solvet Communitati Beverlaci xxd., et ad sustentacionem luminis xxd., sine perdonacione aliquali.

Quilibet vero confrater artis, qui de novo vestitur de secta confratrum suorum in honore sanctissimi Confessoris Sancti Johannis Beverlaci, custodiet illam vesturam per tres annos post recepcionem, utendo illa vestura in festivalibus diebus. Et si vesturam illam infra dictos tres annos prestiterit vel dederit, forisfaciet et solvet usui Communitatis predictae ijs., et expensis luminis et castelli ijs.

Et quicumque predictorum confratrum fuerit extra castellum die Lune Rogacionum post horam primam, vel eodem die post nonam non equitaverit cum confratribus, si sanus et abilis sit equitare, solvet ad opus castelli et artis ijs. iiijd., et Communitati ijs. iiijd., nisi rationabilem excusacionem habeat.

Ordinatum est eciam, quod quilibet confrater artis vestietur de novo quolibet anno quo confratres sue artis vestientur, si abilis sit vestiri. Et quicumque sit abilis, qui causa superbie vel invidie vestiri recusaverit, solvet ad opus Gilde Aule ijs. iiijd., et ad opus castelli ijs. iiijd.

Item quicumque absens fuerit a gilda prima, et quicumque discordiam, litem vel dissensionem fecerit in eleccione Aldermanni aut Senescallorum, postquam major pars confratrum consenserit quem aut quos habere velit, forisfaciet et solvet ad usum Gilde Aule xxd., happen to die in the town of Beverley shall have the light and ornaments of the same [brotherhood] on paying to the light aforesaid one pound of wax.

And any brother or sister of the said brotherhood whodies in poverty, not having property by which he can be honourably buried, shall be buried at the cost and expense of the said brotherhood.

Anyone who shall have been elected for the honour and good government of the aforesaid craft and castle to the office of alderman, fairly and not by way of insult and derision, and shall refuse the office, shall pay to the use of the community, the light and castle, 6s. 8d., to be equally divided. A steward refusing office shall pay 3s. 4d., to be divided in form aforesaid.

Further, if any discord shall have arisen between brother and brother, then the one feeling himself aggrieved shall show his grievance to the alderman and stewards, before showing it or making complaint elsewhere, on pain of loss of 20d. to the community of Beverley, and 20d. to the use of the light.

Every brother who shall unjustly and insolently abuse the alderman or stewards, through malice or malevolently, shall pay to the community of Beverley 20d., and to the maintenance of the light, 20d., without any pardon.

Any brother of the craft newly clothed in the livery of the brethren in honour of the most holy Confessor, S. John of Beverley, shall keep his livery for three years after getting it, using that livery on feast-days. And if he shall lend or give away the livery within the said three years, he shall forfeit and pay to the use of the community aforesaid 2s., and 2s. to the expenses of the light and castle.

And everyone of the aforesaid brethren who shall be outside the castle on Monday in Rogation week after Prime, or on the same day shall not ride with his brethren after noon, if he is sound and able to ride, shall pay to the use of the castle and craft 8s. 4d., and to the community 3s. 4d., unless he have a reasonable excuse.

Also it was ordered that every brother of the craft shall have a new livery every year in which the brethren of his craft have [new] liveries, if he is of ability to have one. And everyone of ability, who through pride or envy refuses to wear the livery, shall pay to the use of the Gild Hall 8s. 4d., and to the use of the castle 8s. 4d.

Also anyone who shall be absent from a prime gild, or shall make disturbance, strife or dissension in the election of alderman or stewards, after the majority of the brethren have come to an agreement whom they wish to have, shall forfeit and pay to the use of the

Et si aliquis confrater artis detracciones aut mendacia sive scandalum falsum erexerit et dixerit de confratre suo eiusdem artis, in absencia sua, unde sic defamatus suam bonam famam aut quantitatem bonorum suorum amittat, et hoc per Aldermannum et Senescallos, et quatuor probos confratres artis probari poterit, solvet Communitati iijs. iiijd., et sustentacioni luminis et castelli iijs. iiijd., sine remedio aut perdonacione aliquali.

Item concordatum est, quod omnes dissenciones et discordie inter confratrem et confratrem remittuntur pro transactis. Ordinatum est quod quicumque lites preteritas recitaverit, vel confratrem suum pro vel de lite vel de litibus preteritis reprobaverit, publice vel occulte, solvet Communitati ville iijs. iiijd., et castello et lumini predictis iijs. iiijd., si inde convinci poterit per consideracionem xij Custodum et Aldermanni et Senescallorum.

Insuper, si Aldermannus et Senescalli aut confratres aliquas constituciones aut ordinaciones fecerint per se sine consensu xij Custodum ville in futurum, solvet Communitati iijs. iiijd., ac lumini et castello iijs. iiijd.

Preterea ordinatum est, quod annuatim fiant duo supervisores, vocati seyrcheours, ad scrutandum et supervidendum defecta predictae artis; veraque scrutacione facienda de quibuscumque ponderis,¹ mensuris et ulnis, tam de contributoribus quam de confratribus, omnibusque defectis inventa presentandum xij Gubernatoribus quam Aldermanno et Senescallis artis. Et qui illud officium recusaverit, solvet Communitati dicte ville xxd., et arti xxd. Et si dicti supervisores aliquem defectum conclaverint, solvet¹ Communitati predictae iijs. iiijd., et arti predictae iijs. iiijd., et erunt ad hoc annuatim iurati.

And any brother of the craft who shall set up detractions or lies or false scandal, and shall say of any brother of the craft in his absence anything whereby the brother so defamed shall lose his good name or any of his goods, and this can be proved by the alderman and stewards and four good brethren of the craft, shall pay to the community 3s. 4d., and to the maintenance of the light and castle 8s. 4d., without remission or pardon of any kind.

Also it was agreed, that all dissensions and differences between brother and brother for what is past be remitted. It was ordered that anyone who shall rehearse past disputes, or abuse his brother for or because of a past dispute or disputes, publicly or in private, shall pay to the community of the town 3s. 4d., and to the castle and light aforesaid 8s. 4d., if he can be thereof convicted in the judgment of the twelve keepers and the alderman and stewards.

Moreover, if the alderman and stewards or any brethren shall in future make any statutes or orders by themselves, without the consent of the twelve keepers of the town, he shall pay to the community 3s. 4d., and to the light and castle 8s. 4d.

It was ordered besides, that there shall be yearly made two overlookers, called searchers, to examine and survey the defaults of the aforesaid craft, and having made a true examination of all weights, measures, and ells, as well of contributors as of brethren, to present all defaults which may be discovered to the twelve governors and the alderman and stewards of the craft. And anyone who shall refuse the office shall pay to the community of the said town 20d., and to the craft 20s., and if the said searchers shall conceal any default, he shall pay to the community aforesaid 3s. 4d., and to the craft aforesaid 3s. 4d., and they shall be yearly sworn to this.

And also it was ordered and decreed to be for ever observed that if any brother of the craft aforesaid shall unduly abuse his brother with angry or insulting words in the presence of his alderman, and is once bidden by the alderman to hold his tongue, and will not obey this order, he shall forfeit and pay to the use of the community aforesaid, and to the maintenance of the light of the said craft 12d., without any pardon.

It was also decreed and ordered besides, that yearly for ever on Sunday next after the Translation of S. Thomas the Martyr (7 June) any alderman, who shall have held office for a year, with his stewards shall render his account in a proper place appointed by the Aldermannum assignando, et premuniet die proxima precedente omnes confratres suos venire ad audiendum compotum suum; qua die idem Aldermannus finaliter compotet, et super compotum exponat denarios debitorum, vel vadia ad valorem, ita quod nichil remaneat levandum post dictum compotum per Aldermannum de novo electum, sub pena forisfacture Communitati ville antedictæ ijs. iiijd., et usui expensarum predictæ artis ijs. iiijd., sine aliqua minoracione, vel per discreccionem xij Custodum ville predictæ aut septem eorum moderatus erit et regulatus. Et quicumque dictorum confratrum se sine causa rationabili illo die a dicto loco absentaverit, vel ibidem non expectaverit donec predictum compotum in omnibus finiatur, solvet ad ornamentum luminis et sustentacionem castelli dictæ artis xijd.

Concessum est eciam et ulterius statutum, quod si aliquis confrater dictæ artis penam alicujus ordinacionis registratæ per ipsum forisfactam Communitati, vel arti predictæ, et hoc solvere recusaverit Aldermannus et Senescallis pro tempore existentibus, quod extunc forisfaciat et solvat vjs. viijd. ad usum Communitatis dictæ ville et usui expensarum artis supradictæ, equaliter dividendos.

Ordinatum est insuper et pro perpetuo concessum, quod si aliquis confrater artis predictæ contra premissas ordinaciones seu ordinacionem transgressus fuerit, et hoc super ipsum legitime probari poterit per Aldermannum et Senescallos et quatuor confratres dictæ artis, quod tunc penam xijjs. iiijd. forisfaciat et solvet indilate, in forma predicta equaliter dividendorum, vel per discreccionem xij custodum ville qui pro tempore fuerint aut septem eorum secundum quantitatem delicti erit regulatus et moderatus, ut supradictum est.

Item ordinatum est et statutum, quod quilibet confrater, qui de novo recipietur in confraternitatem dictorum Mercatorum et Mercorum, primus humiliter Aldermannus, qui pro tempore fuerit, faciet securitatem fidei, obedire omnibus ordinacionibus et statutis in presenti registro specificatis et eas potestate sua implere; et solvet primo anno introitus sui Aldermannus et Senescallis qui pro tempore fuerint, ad sustentacionem luminis et castelli supradictorum, vjs. viijd.

Preterea ordinatum est, quod quicumque occupat, seu occupabit, occupacionem Mercatorum vel Mercorum, sicut confrater dictæ artis, infra villam Beverlaci, et non est burgensis et abilis fuerit esse burgensis, solvet annuatim communibus expensis dictæ ville ijs. iiijd.; et communibus expensis luminis et castelli ijs. iiijd. Et si fuerit alderman, and the day before shall warn all his brethren to come and hear his account; on which day the alderman shall finally account, and on his account shall pay down the cash due from debtors, or give security to the value thereof, so that nothing may remain to be levied after the said account by the alderman newly elected, on pain of forfeiture of 3s. 4d. to the use of the community of the town aforesaid, and 3s. 4d. to the use of the expenses of the craft aforesaid, without any diminution, or else he shall be assessed and ruled at the discretion of the twelve keepers of the town aforesaid, or seven of them. And every one of the brethren aforesaid who shall absent himself from the said place on that day, without reasonable cause, or shall not wait there till the end of the aforesaid account, shall pay 12d. to the decoration of the light and the maintenance of the castle of the said craft.

It was also granted and further decreed, that if any brother of the said craft shall refuse to pay to the alderman and stewards for the time being any penalty forfeited by him to the community or the craft under any registered order, that then he shall forfeit and pay 6s. 8d. to the use of the community of the said town, and to the use of the expenses of the craft aforesaid, to be equally divided.

It was ordered and moreover granted for ever, that if any brother of the craft aforesaid shall transgress any order or orders before rehearsed, and this shall be found against him in due form of law by the aldermen and stewards and four brethren of the said craft, that then he shall forfeit and pay without delay the penalty of 13s. 4d., to be equally divided, in form aforesaid, or he shall be ruled and governed as is aforesaid at the discretion of the twelve keepers of the town for the time being, or seven of them, according to the greatness of his fault.

Also it was ordered and decreed that every brother who shall be newly admitted into the brotherhood of the said merchants and mercers, shall first humbly give security of his fealty to the alderman for the time being to obey all the orders and statutes specified in the present register, and fulfil them to the best of his power, and shall pay in the first year of his entrance to the alderman and stewards for the time being to the maintenance of the light and castle aforesaid, 6s. 8d.

Moreover it was ordered that everyone who follows, or shall follow, the occupation of merchants or mercers, as a brother of the said craft, in the town of Beverley, and is not a burgess, but is of ability to be a burgess, shall pay yearly to the common expenses of the said town 2s. 4d., and to the common expenses of light and castle 2s. 4d. ORDERS OF THE DRAPERS.

Of the orders and statutes of the craft of Drapers newly founded by the consent and request of the said Drapers, and grant and licence of Adam Newcombe [etc.] the twelve keepers or governors of the town of Beverley, with the consent and assent of all the aldermen of the same town, present in the Gild Hall on S. Mark the Evangelist's day (25th April), A.D. 1493, the underwritten statutes and orders were ordered to be registered and for ever observed, in form following.

First, that there shall be of the same Drapers a brotherhood for the maintenance of a wooden castle to be erected on Mondays in Rogation week yearly for ever next the castle of the Mercers, when the venerable procession with the shrine of the most holy confessor of Christ, John, shall be borne to the chapel of the Blessed Mary the Virgin. And that the aldermen and stewards of the craft aforesaid shall yearly erect and properly cover in the said castle, on pain of forfeiture of 40s. to the community of Beverley. And that every master of the aforesaid craft shall sit in his best clothes and apparel in the same castle on the coming of the procession aforesaid. And anyone then absent, if he is in the town and well, shall lose 6s. 8d. to the use of the community of the town and the craft aforesaid, to be equally divided. And in the afternoon every brother in the same clothing and apparel shall on the said Monday ride with his brethren, as the custom is, next to the Mercers, under the penalty aforesaid.

Also the said Drapers shall maintain and find among them a candle of wax before the image of S. Michael the Archangel in the church or chapel of the Blessed Mary the Virgin burning on Sundays and other feast-days throughout the year.

Moreover that the said Drapers shall play or cause to be played on the feast of Corpus Christi a play called 'Dooming Pilate,'¹ every year when the community of Beverley consent on S. Mark's day that the plays should be played, under the penalty therefor specified in the common register, viz. 40s.

These great costs and charges are now newly charged on the said

Drapers, where before they had no such charges, and therefore it is adjudged by the said governors and the said aldermen, and by them granted, that the said Drapers, both now and in time to come, may make hose and keep apprentices and servants sewing in their shops without any hindrance, or payment of any contribution to the Tailors' craft, as was anciently¹ registered in the Gild Hall.

Also it was ordered by the consent and assent of the said twelve governors and the said aldermen, that any burgess who carries on the buying and selling of cloth by retail in the town of Beverley, shall be in brotherhood and livery with the said Drapers, on pain of forfeiture of £10 to the community aforesaid.

Further it was ordered by the aforesaid Governors, that the aforesaid Drapers shall yearly on Tuesday in Rogation week elect and create among themselves a fit person to be alderman and two stewards to rule and govern the customs and liberties of the craft aforesaid for a whole year. And anyone elected to the office of alderman and refusing it, shall pay to the use of the community and to the maintenance of the castle, light and pageant, 8s. 4d., to be equally divided. And each of the stewards elected and refusing office shall pay 20s. in form aforesaid.

And they shall have among them two meetings a year, called prime gilds: viz. one on S. John the Evangelist's day at Christmas (28 December), and the other on the second Sunday after Easter. And every brother who is absent on either of the same days, if he received notice the day before, shall pay to the maintenance of the light and castle 12d., without any pardon, unless he has a reasonable excuse.

Also it was ordered by the aforesaid twelve governors, with the consent and assent of the said alderman, that every man, whether he is a burgess or not, who carries on the business of the buying and selling of cloth by retail in his open shop, shall pay in the first year of his carrying on business, for his setting up shop, 4s.

Also it was ordered that everyone newly made a brother of the craft shall pay, at his entrance, to the maintenance of the light aforesaid, one pound of wax.

And that every man of the said craft, whether he is a burgess or not, shall obey all the proper and lawful commands and orders of the alderman and stewards for the time being, and fulfil the same commands and orders, being lawful and proper, without any demur, on Preterea ordinatum est, quod annuatim die Dominica proxima post Festum Nativitatis Sancti Johannis Baptiste Aldermannus, qui per annum occupaverit, cum suis senescallis compotum suum reddet in loco honesto per ipsum Aldermannum assignando, et premuniet omnes confratres suos venire ad audiendum compotum suum. Et qui se sine causa racionabili illo die a predicto loco se absentaverit, vel ibidem non expectaverit, xijd. solvet ad sustentacionem castelli, luminis et pagende supradictorum. Et si Aldermannus tunc compotum suum non reddat, et confratribus suis debite non satisfaciat, ijs. iiijd. solvat in forma antedicta dividendos, et nihilominus reddet compotum suum postea.

Insuper ordinatum est, quod si lis vel debata orte fuerint inter confratrem et confratrem ejusdem artis, quod ille qui asserit sibi inesse dampnum vel injuriam, primo demonstretur ¹ Aldermanno et senescallis, et discordes stabunt awardo et ordinacioni Aldermanni et senescallorum et iiij^{or} confratrum per discordes hinc inde elegendos. Et si alter vel uterque eorum concordiam refutaverit, vel ei non steterit, solvet Communitati Beverlaci et ad sustentacionem luminis castelli et pagende predictorum, ijs. iiijd., equaliter dividendos.

² Preterea ordinatum est per dictos xij Gubernatores, quod quilibet Burgensis, qui occupat, seu occupabit, aliquam shoppam apertam in retallendo pannorum Pannariis pertinencium ultra valorem iiij marcarum in uno anno, et non est in vestura et confraternitate cum dictis Pannariis, solvet annuatim pro contribucione sua ³ [quando ludus corporis Christi lusus est infra villam Beverlaci propriis expensis dicte confraternitatis, ijs. iiijd. Et in illo anno quando lusus non est lusus] ³ ijs. iiijd. solvet ad sustentacionem predictorum luminis et castelli.

Aceciam quicumque occupat seu occupabit aliquam shoppam apertam infra villam Beverlaci in retallendo pannorum, et non est burgensis, et abilis sit esse burgensem ⁴ et confratrem, et sic presentatur per Aldermannum Pannariorum xij Gubernatoribus, et per eorum discrecionem sit abilis esse Burgensem et confratrem et non vult esse, solvet annuatim pro contribucione sua Aldermanno dicto Pannariorum qui pro tempore erit, ijs. iiijd., et Communitati ville Beverlaci ijs. iiijd., donec fuerit Burgensis et confrater.

pain of forfeiture of 6s. 8d. to the community aforesaid, to be equally divided.

Moreover it was ordered that every year on Sunday next after the Nativity of S. John the Baptist (24 June), the alderman who has filled office for a year, with his stewards, shall render his account in a proper place to be appointed by the alderman, and shall give notice to all his brethren to come to hear his account. And every one who shall absent himself without reasonable cause from the aforesaid place that day, or shall not stay there, shall pay 12d. to the maintenance of the aforesaid castle, light and play. And if the alderman shall not then render his account, and not duly satisfy his brethren, he shall pay 8s. 4d. to be divided in form aforesaid, and shall all the same render his account afterwards.

It was moreover ordered that if any difference or debate shall arise between brother and brother of the same craft, he who asserts that he has suffered loss or damage, shall first show it to the alderman and stewards, and the parties at variance shall abide by the award and order of the alderman and stewards and four of the brethren to be chosen by both parties. And if either of them refuse to make it up, or shall not abide by the award, he shall pay to the community of Beverley and to the maintenance of the light, castle and play aforesaid, 8s. 4d., to be equally divided.

Moreover it was ordered by the said twelve governors that every burgess who shall carry on any open shop retailing cloth belonging to the Drapers' craft beyond the value of 4 marks (£2 13s. 4d.) in one year, and is not in the livery and brotherhood of the said Drapers, shall pay yearly for his contribution when the Corpus Christi play is played in the town of Beverley to the expenses of the said brotherhood 8s. 4d.; and in a year when the play is not played, shall pay 2s. 4d. to the maintenance of the said light and castle.

And also whoever occupies or shall occupy any open shop in the town of Beverley for retailing cloth, and is not a burgess but is of ability to be a burgess and brother, and is so presented by the alderman of the Drapers to the twelve governors, and in their judgment is of ability to be a burgess and brother, but will not be, shall pay yearly for his contribution to the said alderman of the Drapers for the time being 8s. 4d., and to the community of the town of Beverley 8s. 4d., until he shall be a burgess and brother.

It was also ordered and decreed in the year above mentioned that Pannarii de seipsis annuatim eligant duos viros honestos, vulgariter vocatos seyrors, ad scrutandum le yerd wandes et alia defecta vel injuria ad artem sive scienciam pannariorum pertinencia, et annuatim coram Gubernatoribus ville per Aldermannum presentabitur,¹ et ibi secundum consuetudinem ville juramentum suum faciet. Et omnia injuria seu defecta per dictos scrutatores inventa tam de contributario quam de confratre, coram dictis Gubernatoribus demonstrabit. Et si aliquis confrater vel contributor ipsum in officium suum facientem verbis contumeliosis seu iracundis reprobaverit, vel despicerit, tunc forisfaciet Communitati ejusdem ville et expensis ejusdem artis, iijs. iiijd. equaliter dividendos, tociens quociens reus inventus fuerit.

² Aceciam in omnibus diebus nundinarum et marcatorum, videlicet Sabbatorum, unus scrutatorum Cissorum et scrutator Pannariorum pariter scrutabuntur omnes pannarios in patria manentes, quando eis viderint necessaria.

the Drapers aforesaid shall elect from among themselves every year two honest men, commonly called searchers, to examine the yardwands, and other defaults or injuries pertaining to the craft or mystery of Drapers, and he shall be yearly presented to the governors of the town by the alderman, and there according to the custom of the town he shall take his oath. And he shall show all injuries and defaults found by the said searchers, as well in a contributor or a brother, to the governors. And if any brother or contributor shall abuse him when doing his office with contemptuous or angry words, or insult him, he shall forfeit to the community of the same town and the expenses of the same craft, 3s. 4d. to be equally divided, as often as he shall be found guilty.

And also on all fair and market days, viz. Saturdays, one of the searchers of the Tailors and the searcher of the Drapers shall together examine all drapers remaining in the country, when they shall think necessary.

ORDER BETWEEN THE DRAPERS AND TAILORS.

Be it remembered that there was a great dispute, and matter of variance and discord arose between the drapers of Beverley and the tailors of the same town; for which the aforesaid drapers and tailors came here to the Gild Hall, on 4 December, A.D. 1494, and humbly submitted themselves to the arbitration, award and judgment of Thomas Sigglesythorne [etc.] the twelve keepers or governors of the above-mentioned town.

Who thus gave their award and judgment that all the aforesaid drapers and tailors of the said town shall in future be good friends and friendly to one another and all malice existing between them shall be freely put aside for ever.

And moreover the aforesaid twelve governors ordered and decreed, that every tailor of the above-mentioned town, who carries on or shall carry on the buying and selling of cloth beyond the value of four marks, orum, qui pro tempore fuerint¹ ijs. iiijd. Et omnes apprenticii et servientes supradictorum cissorum erint liberi ad occupandum dictam scienciam pannariorum sub magistris suis, sine solucione alicujus contribucionis predictis Pannariis.

Aceciam ordinatum est et statutum per dictos xij Gubernatores, quod omnes predicti Pannarii, qui sunt confratres predictae confraternitatis, erint liberi ad faciendum caligas rotundas, caligas pro mulieribus et le soks, sine alicujus contribucionis solucione predictis cissoribus.

Et si aliquis predictorum Pannariorum faciat caligas clausure solvet annuatim Aldermanno supradictorum Cissorum pro contribucione sua, viijd.

Et si aliquis supradictorum Pannariorum faciat aliquas alias vesturas, sed tantum caligas, solvet et contribuet annuatim Aldermanno Cissorum, ijs., et ulterius non onerabitur.

Et omnes Apprenticii et servientes supradictorum Pannariorum erint liberi ad aptandum et sueandum sub magistris suis sine alicujus contribucionis solucione supradictis cissoribus.

Et ad istas ordinaciones consenserunt Johannes Armestronge, Aldermannus Cissorum, Johannes Penrose, Johannes Lee, scrutatores, et cum eis Thomas Bawde et Willelmus Sparrow, in nomine omnium confratrum suorum et successorum suorum, Cissorum. Et alterius partis Johannes Wylymott, Aldermannus Pannariorum, Ricardus Boyth, scrutator, et cum eis, Robertus Rose et Willelmus Boyth, in nomine omnium confratrum suorum et successorum suorum, Pannariorum.

Et si aliquis confratrum predictorum Pannariorum et Cissorum qui nunc sunt, et qui in tempore futuro erint, qui contra predictas ordinaciones et constituciones rebellus¹ inventus fuerit, vel aliquam transgressionem fecerit, et hoc super ipsum legitime probari poterit, forisfaciet et solvet Communitati ville Beverlaci, xls., sine perdonacione aliquali, tociens quociens aliquis eorum culpabilis inventus fuerit.

Ordinatum est eciam et statutum per Willelmum Peyrson, Alexandrum Bossall, Robertum Burton et socios suos, xij Gubernatores sive Custodes ville Beverlaci, ad supplicacionem Ricardi Boothe et omnium confratrum suorum dicte artis Pannariorum, quod quilibet magister dicte artis, sive sit in confraternitate Pannariorum sive non, qui capit aliquem apprenticiu sibi ad serviendum, sub more apprenticii, solvet primo anno introitus sui ad expensas dicte artis, ijs., et si shall pay for his contribution yearly to the alderman of the Drapers for the time being 2s. 4d. And all apprentices and servants of the aforesaid tailors shall be free to carry on the said mystery of drapers under their masters, without paying any contribution to the aforesaid Drapers.

And also it was ordered and decreed by the said twelve governors that all the aforesaid drapers who are brothers of the said brotherhood shall be free to make round hose, stockings for women and socks without payment of any contribution to the aforesaid Tailors.

And if any of the aforesaid drapers make cloth hose he shall pay yearly to the alderman of the aforesaid Tailors for his contribution, 8d.

And if any of the aforesaid drapers shall make any other clothes, except hose, he shall pay and contribute yearly to the alderman of the Tailors 2s., and shall not be charged beyond that.

And all apprentices and servants of the aforesaid drapers shall be free to fit and sew under their masters without paying any contribution to the aforesaid Tailors.

And John Armstrong, alderman of the Tailors, John Penrose, John Lee, searchers, and with them Thomas Bawd and William Sparrow, in the name of all their brethren and successors, Tailors, and, on the other part, John Wilmot, alderman of the Drapers, Richard Booth, searcher, and with them Robert Rose and William Booth, in the name of all their brethren and successors, Drapers, consented to these orders.

And if any of the brethren of the aforesaid who are now or hereafter shall be Drapers and Tailors shall be found opposing the aforesaid orders and statutes, or transgressing them, and shall be lawfully proved guilty thereof, he shall forfeit and pay to the community of the town of Beverley 40s., without any pardon, as often as he shall have been found guilty thereof.

It is also ordered and decreed by William Pearson, Alexander Bossall, Robert Burton, and their fellows, the twelve governors or keepers of the town of Beverley, at the petition of Richard Boothe and all his brethren of the said craft of Drapers, that every master of the said craft, whether he is in the brotherhood of Drapers or not, who takes any apprentice into his service, as an apprentice, shall pay in the first year of his entrance to the expenses of the said craft 2s., and anyone aliquis contra hanc ordinacionem rebellus¹ inventus fuerit forisfaciet vjs. viijd. equaliter dividendos.

Acceiam ordinatum est per predictos xij Gubernatores, quod quilibet serviens, qui vocatur a jornaman, solvet annuatim ad expensas dicte artis, iiijd., et hoc recipietur de magistro suo, sive sit in confraternitate cum Pannariis sive non, si de dicto magistro suo licite petatur per Aldermannum vel per Senescallos ejusdem artis, per spacium unius mensis, antequam dictus jornaman a magistro suo abiret. BARBERS.

The orders and constitutions of the craft of Barbers of Beverley were shown in the Gild Hall of Beverley, and seen and diligently inspected by Thomas Coppandale, Nicholas Chamberlain [&c.], and their fellows the twelve governors of the community of Beverley, A.D. 1414. And because in the same orders they found and felt some difficulties affecting their consciences and understandings, they ordered the underwritten statutes and orders to be registered and for ever observed in the form following.

And first to the praise and honour of Almighty God, the glorious Virgin Mary and S. John the Baptist, it was ordered and decreed that there should be of the same barbers a brotherhood among themselves for the keeping of peace and quiet, and that they should maintain and find yearly honest serges or a light in the chapel of the Blessed Mary the Virgin of Beverley before the image of S. John the Baptist, as they have heretofore been accustomed to do.

And that they play or caused to be played a pageant of the aforesaid S. John baptising Christ in the Jordan, yearly, when the community of Beverley on 25 April consent that the plays shall be played; under the penalty registered in the Common Register.

Further that they elect from amongst themselves a fit man called alderman, and two stewards, yearly, in accustomed fashion, to honourably govern and oversee the brethren of the craft aforesaid for a whole year. And anyone so elected alderman refusing the office shall pay 2lb. of wax to the maintenance of the light aforesaid. And a steward elected refusing office shall pay 1lb. wax.

And everyone of the aforesaid craft newly setting up shop and newly carrying on business, as a master, shall pay the alderman and steward for the maintenance of the play and light aforesaid 2s. and 1lb. of wax, on beginning business, without delay.

And every master newly beginning business and taking an apprentice into his service, whether bound by indenture or not, shall pay the alderman for the time being 2s., before the account of the alderman for that year, towards the maintenance of the play and light aforesaid.

Moreover, every brother of the same craft who reproves his alderman without measure and offensively, or attacks him with dum steterit in officio suo, et inde per suos confratres hoc testantes convictus fuerit, solvet custodibus Communitatis ville Beverlaci, ad opus Communitatis, xxd. ; Et ad sustentacionem pagende et luminis predictorum, xxd. ; tociens quociens convictus fuerit sine perdonacione aliquali. Et qui Senescallum sic reprobaverit medietatem pene predictae solvet sine perdonacione in forma predicta. Dum tamen si oporteat causa predicta forisfacture coram predictis custodibus divolvatur, videlicet si delinquens inter suos confratres se equitatem non habere conqueratur.

Insuper si dissensio, lis vel debata, exorte fuerint infuturum inter confratrem et confratrem ejusdem artis, tunc ille qui sentit se gravari, conqueretur primo Aldermanno suo, et discordes stabunt iudicio et awardo quatuor confratrum per eos hinc inde eligendorum, et Aldermanni sui; quod si recusaverint, vel alter eorum recusaverit, solvet ad opus artis sue, xxd. ; Et ad opus Communitatis, ijs. iiijd. Ita quod si alter eorum sibi non senciat fieri equitatem per suos confratres, tunc causa immediate predictis xij Custodibus Communitatis sub pena predicta divolvatur.

Predicti insuper confratres artis predictae habebunt annuatim inter eos duas gildas primas, unam videlicet in septimana Natalis Domini et alteram in septimana Pasche. Et quicumque predictorum confratrum somonitus fuerit ad alteram predictarum Gildarum primarum die precedente, et non venerit, solvet ad sustentacionem luminis predicti jlb. cere, nisi excuset se rationabiliter somonitori artis, vel extra villam fuerit, et excusacio ejus per Aldermannum et Senescallos admittatur.

Et quod habebunt diem eleccionis Aldermanni et senescallorum in septimana proxima post festum Corporis Christi sub eisdem forma et pena.

Ordinatum est eciam et statutum quod nulla Gilda prima teneatur, nec congregacio aliqua quocumque tempore fiat per confratres predictos, pro aliqua ordinacione vel constitucione artis predictae, nisi in presencia Aldermanni et senescallorum et ubi ipsi rationabiliter assignaverint, sub pena ijs. iiijd. ad opus Communitatis ville solvenda, et ijs. iiijd. ad opus artis predictae, per quemlibet contra ordinacionem predictam delinquentem solvenda.

Et quod ipsi nullam constitucionem sive ordinacionem inter eos ordinent, seu faciant inter eos ordinari, nisi fuerit racioni consona, et custodibus Communitatis qui pro tempore erunt ostensa, ac per eos admittatur, et simul cum presentibus ordinacionibus registrari concedatur, sub pena proxime antedicta.

abusive words while he holds office, and is thereof convicted by his brethren giving evidence thereof, shall pay to the community of the town of Beverley to the use of the community 20d., and to the maintenance of the pageant and light aforesaid, 20d., as often as he shall be convicted, without any pardon. And anyone abusing a steward shall pay half the penalty aforesaid without pardon, in form aforesaid. Provided, however, that the case of the aforesaid forfeiture may be brought up before the aforesaid keepers, viz. if the offender complain that he cannot get justice among his brethren.

Moreover if dissension, strife, or debate shall arise hereafter between brother and brother of the same craft, anyone who feels himself aggrieved, may complain first to his alderman, and those at variance shall stand to the judgment and award of four of their brethren elected by both parties and their alderman; and if they refuse, or either of them refuses, he shall pay to the use of their craft 20d., and to the use of the community 8s. 4d., provided that if either of them feel that justice is not done to him by his brethren, then the case shall immediately be brought to the twelve keepers of the community under the penalty aforesaid.

Moreover the aforesaid brethren of the craft aforesaid shall have yearly among them two Prime Gilds, viz. one in Christmas and the other in Easter week. And every of the aforesaid brethren who shall receive notice on the day before of these Prime Gilds and not come, shall pay to the maintenance of the light aforesaid 1lb. of wax, unless he give reasonable excuse to the summoner of the craft, or be out of town, and his excuse be admitted by the alderman and stewards.

And that they shall have the election day of alderman and stewards in the week after Corpus Christi day, under the same form and penalty.

It was ordered also and decreed that no Prime Gild shall be held, or any meeting at any time made by the brethren aforesaid except in presence of the alderman and stewards, and at some reasonable place assigned by them, under penalty of 8s. 4d. to be paid to the use of the community, and 8s. 4d. to the use of the craft aforesaid by everyone offending against the order aforesaid.

And that they do not make or cause to be made any constitution or order amongst themselves, unless it is reasonable and has been shown to the keepers of the community for the time being, and admitted and granted by them to be registered with the present orders, under the penalty last above-mentioned.

Hee constitutiones declarate fuerunt coram Johanne Morthwaytt, Willelmo Sighsill, Willelmo Nonyngton, Nicholao Fenton, Roberto Shirwode, Ricardo Dalton et Petro Barbor, barbitonsoribus, qui eas pro se admiserunt; et postea Thomas Hardy, Johannes Gudchawnce et Andreas Stalworthman.

1416. Ordinatum est eciam et statutum, et per xij Gubernatores ville Beverlaci concessum et confirmatum, quod nullus magister ejusdem artis, nec alicujus serviens eorumdem, radet in quibuscumque diebus Dominicis infra villam Beverlaci, nec infra tres leugas circumquaque, temporibus futuris, exceptis diebus dominicis inter festa Sancti Petri ad Vincula et Sancti Michaelis, exceptis diebus dominicis ante dies Rogationum, festis Nativitatis Sancti Johannis Baptiste et Translationis Sancti Johannis Beverlaci in yeme, si in dominica evenerint. Quod si fecerit aliquis eorumdem solvet ad opus Communitatis ville Beverlaci, iijs. iiijd., et ad communem utilitatem artis, iijs. iiijd.; tociens quociens convictus fuerit.

Et similiter si aliquis, qui non est confrater artis nec serviens nec apprenticius confratris, radat contra formam ordinacionis predictae, tunc ad solucionem pene predictae arcus compellatur, secundum quod contra radentes in Dominicis est statutum. Et si aliquis talis qui non est de arte communiter et continue aliis diebus quam Dominicis arte predicta utatur, tunc costagiis confratrum contribuat annuatim.

Concessum est insuper et conformiter ordinatum, quod omnes communes factores et venditores ceriorum venalium infra villam Beverlaci contribuant annuis expensis artis, secundum quantitatem ocupacionis sue, exceptis Sacrista ecclesie Collegiate Beati Johannis Beverlaci et aliis continuis servitoribus ecclesiarum, pro hiis que spectant Sancte Matri Ecclesie.

Ad prescripta convenerunt et consensuerunt Petrus Barbor,

These constitutions were declared before John Morethwaite, William Sixhill, William Nunnington, Nicholas Fenton, Robert Sherwood, Richard Dalton and Peter Barber, barbers, who admitted them so far as they were concerned, as did afterwards Thomas Hardy, John Goodchance, and Andrew Stalwartman.

It was also ordered and decreed and granted and confirmed by the twelve governors of the town of Beverley, that no master of the same craft nor servant of the same shall henceforth shave on Sunday in the town of Beverley or within three leagues round, except on Sundays between S. Peter ad Vincula (1 Aug.) and Michaelmas, and the Sundays before Rogation days, and the feasts of the Nativity of S. John the Baptist (24 June) and the Translation of S. John of Beverley in winter (25 October), if they fall on Sundays. And if any of the same do so, he shall pay to the use of the community of the town of Beverley 8s. 4d. and to the common use of the craft 8s. 4d. ; as often as he shall be convicted.

And likewise if anyone, not being a brother of the craft or a servant or apprentice of a brother, shave in despite of the order aforesaid, then he shall be strictly bound to pay the penalty aforesaid, as is decreed in the statute against those who shave on Sundays. And if any such who is not of the craft commonly and continuously practises his craft on other days than Sundays, then he shall contribute yearly to the costs of the brethren.

It was also decreed and granted, as it had been formerly decreed, that all medical men, surgeons, physicians and drawers of teeth, and every of them who intend to live in the town of Beverley for a whole year, shall contribute to the common expenses and costs of the craft aforesaid as a brother, and if he shall intend to stay half a year, they shall pay half such expenses, and if for a quarter of a year, a quarter ; but for a less stay they shall not pay or contribute, provided that the payments aforesaid shall go to the play of the craft.

It was granted moreover and likewise ordered that all common makers and vendors of wax candles for sale within the town of Beverley contribute to the yearly expenses of the craft, according to the amount of his business, except the Sacrist of the collegiate church of S. John of Beverley and other permanent ministers of churches, so far as concerns things pertaining to Holy Mother Church.

There consented and agreed to the above written Peter Barber,

CHARTER OF ARCHBISHOP THURSTAN TO BEVERLEY, c. 1180.¹

T. Dei gracia Eboracensis Archiepiscopus cunctis Christi fidelibus tam presentibus quam futuris salutem ⁽¹⁾, Dei benedictionem et suam.

Notum sit vobis me dedisse et concessisse, et consilio capituli Eboracensis et Beverlacensis et consilio meorum Baronum, mea carta confirmasse hominibus de Beverlaco omnes libertates eisdem legibus quibus illi de Eboraco habent in sua civitate.

Preterea non lateat vos quod dominus H. Rex noster nobis concessit potestatem faciendi h[ec] ⁽²⁾ de bona voluntate sua, et sua carta confirmavit statuta nostra et leges nostras juxta formam legum burgensium de Eboraco, salva dignitate et honore Dei et S. Johannis et nostri et canonicorum; ut ita s[cilicet] honorem elemosinarum predecessorum suorum exaltaret et promoveret. Cum omnibus his liberis consuetudinibus, volo ut Burgenses mei de Beverlaco habeant suam Hanshus, quam eis do et concedo ut ibi sua statuta pertractent ad honorem Dei et S. Johannis et Canonicorum, et ad tocius villatus emendacionem, eadem libertatis ⁽³⁾ lege sicut illi de Eboraco habent in sua Hanshus.

Concedo et ⁽⁴⁾ eis teloneum ⁽⁵⁾ in perpetuum pro v ⁽⁶⁾ et iij ⁽⁷⁾ marchis annuatim, preterquam in tribus ⁽⁸⁾ festis in quibus teloneum ⁽⁹⁾ ad nos et ad Canonicos spectat, in festo s[cilicet] S. Johannis Confessoris in Maio et in festo translacionis S. Johannis et in nativitate S. Johannis Baptiste: in his vero tribus festis omnes Burgenses de Beverlaco ab omni teloneo liberos et quietos dimisi.

Hujus eciam carte testimonio eisdem Burgensibus liberos introitus et exitus concessi, s[cilicet] in villa et extra villam, in plano et bosco et maresio ⁽¹⁰⁾, in viis et in semitis et ceteris convenienciis, exceptis ⁽¹¹⁾ pratis et bladis, sicut unquam melius, liberius, et largius aliquis possit concedere et confirmare. Et sciatis quod sunt liberi et quieti ab omni teloneo ⁽¹²⁾ per totam schiram Eboraci sicut illi de Eboraco.

Et volo ut quicumque h[ec] ⁽¹³⁾ [disfecerit] ⁽¹⁴⁾ anathema sit, sicut ipsius ecclesie S. Johannis asserit consuetudo, et sicut statutum est in ecclesia S. Johannis.

Hii sunt testes, Gaufridus ⁽¹⁵⁾ Murdoc ⁽¹⁶⁾, Nigellus Fossard, [Alanus de] ⁽¹⁷⁾ Perci, Walterus Spec ⁽¹⁸⁾, Eustachius filius Johannis, Tomas Prepositus, Turstinus Archidiaconus, Herbertus ⁽¹⁹⁾ Can[onicus] ⁽²⁰⁾, Willelmus filius Tole, Willelmus de ⁽²¹⁾ Baius ⁽²²⁾, coram tota familia Archiepiscopi clericis et laicis in Eboraco.'

The variants printed in Bishop Stubbs's edition, Select Charters, p. 105, from Rymer's Fœdera, i. 10, are as numbered.

² The words printed in italics are rubrics in the original.

³ The original has tn. It is possibly tu for tut = all, not tn for tant.

Winchester.

Weavers and fullers not to dry or dye cloth, or sell it outside the town, but only to merchants of the city, on pain of forfeiture by sheriffs and good men; nor to buy anything except their trade necessities, unless by yearly fee to Sheriff. They cannot be witnesses against freemen. If one wish to give up his craft, he must forswear it and pay for the freedom of the city.

Marlborough.

Not to give evidence against freemen. If he buy meat for 8d. or more, he shall pay customs. He can only weave or work for the good men of the town; and have no cloth worth more than a penny, except 5 ells a year for his own clothes. If he gets rich and wants to become a freeman, he must pass the first and the whole of a second year without working, and the third year forswear his craft to enter the franchise, if he have the wherewithal to satisfy the good men.

Oxford.

Not to weave or full except by agreement with good men of town on pain of forfeiture.

A weaver's widow can only marry a weaver if she wishes to weave. They are not able to give evidence.

Ceo est la lai des teliers et des fuluns de Oxeforde.

Ceo est asaavoir kil ne poent nul drap tistre ne fuler ke lur soit sanz le gre as prudes humes de la uile, et sil le funt et soient ataint, si est pris cum chatel forfait; et quant teler muert sa feme ne poet estre espusee si a telier nun pur koi ele uelle suivre cel mestier.

Nuls franc hume ne poet estre ataint par telier ne par fulun, ne il poent nul tesmoin porter.

Beverley.

They cannot dry cloth, nor buy or sell outside the town; no freeman can be convicted by them; they cannot give evidence.

If one wishes to abjure his craft he must deal with him called mayor and the bailiffs to be received into the franchise; and turn his tools out of his house.

This law they have from the franchise of London, as they say.

Ceo est la lai de teliers et de fuluns de beuerle.

Ceo est asaavoir kil ne poent nul drap sechir ne a nule marchandise fare hors del la uile aler, ne nul franc hume ne poet estre ataint par eus ne nul tesmoin ne poent porter. Et sil ueut sun mestier foriurer, face ver lui ke est maire apele et uers les baillifs de la uile kil soit en la franchise de la uile recu; et oste le ustils de sa mesun.

E ceste lai unt il en la franchise de Lundres, si cum il dient.

SIR RALPH ELLERKER'S BOND TO ARCHBISHOP CARDINAL THOMAS WOLSEY, RESPECTING POACHING IN THE ARCHBISHOP'S PARKS, 9 AUGUST 1516.

A Submission of Sir Raphe Ellerker.

This Indenture made the ixth day of Auguste the viijth yere of oure Sovereigne Lorde King Henry the viijth Witnesseth that I, Sir Rauff Ellerkar the elder, knighte, In moste humble and lamentable wyse submytte my self unto my lorde Cardinalles grace. And trewly confessith that I have many tymys, recklesly and agayne all goode order of the lawe, and contrary to goode consyence, mysbehavyd my selfe and wylfully offendyd God and Saynte John of Beverlay, and my saide lorde Cardinall, And contynually many yerys from tyme to tyme I have fallyn in to the sentence of the Chyrche of God, brekyng the Parke of Beverlay; and in the dayes of sundry my saide lordes predecessors I have kyllyd many dere, mo then I can noumber or esteme, And now late, not dredyng the lawfull ponyshment that myghte ensew, my servaunts Henry Norham and Roberte Hunte, of theyr unhappy myndes, withowte my commaundement, dyd lyg in a wayte of oon George Myllet, servaunte unto my saide lordes grace, and palasoure of the parke of Beverlay, and browghte hym unto me in to Cottingham parke in to a place callyd the lorde Powes launde; In the which launde I had no thyng to doo, nother auctoryte nor office; and there I kepte hym as presoner, contrary to the kinges peace, for a certaine tyme; whereby the saide George Myllet was lettyd to doo servyce unto my saide Lorde within his saide office and parke.

And over thys where as the kinges hyghnes by his moste honorable letters patents hathe grauntyd unto my saide lorde Cardinalles grace the laste vacacion of the Archbysshoprck of Yorke with all proffittes, Commodites, Gamys, Forrestys, Parkys, and Chasys ther unto belongyng, I the saide Sir Rauff shewith and confessith that duryng and within the tyme of the saide vacacion, I have, unlawfully and contrary to ryghte, enteryd in to the parke of reste within the lordeshyp of Shyrborne and Cawoode and ther huntyd and kyllyd a bucke ¹ and dyverse other dere¹ withowte lycence of my saide lorde.

For the which my saide mysdemeaners and unlauffull dedys doon and commytted agayne his grace and the ryghte of his chyrche, I, the saide Sir Rauff, do submytte my selfe body and goodes unto his grace, besechyng hym to have marcy and pyte uppon me and to consyder my povertie, not able to make full satysfaccion unto his grace. And by these presentes I bynde my selfe unto his grace in the sum of cc^{li} that I, the saide Sir Rauff, shall fulfyll and pay, stande to and obbey suche pounyshment, fyne and correccion as his grace or his Counsell ther unto by hym assigned, wyll commaunde juge or awarde.

In wytnes here of to the oon partie of this Indenture I have set to my seall; And to the other partye thereof William Bedyll, Treasurer of my saide lordes householde, and Master Hewgh Assheton, Surveyar of his Landys, Counsellors to my saide lorde, have set to theyr seals the day and yere above saide.

PUBLICATIONS.

The Volumes already published are

Vol. I., for 1887. SELECT PLEAS OF THE CROWN. Vol. I., A.D. 1200-1225. Edited, from the Rolls preserved in H.M. Public Record Office, by F. W. MAITLAND, Downing Professor of the Laws of England, Cambridge. With Facsimile. Crown 4to. Price to non-members, 28s.

A selection from the earliest records of English criminal justice. These criminal cases throw much light on the manners and customs of the people; they illustrate the working of the ordeals of fire and water, and show how a substitute was gradually found in trial by jury. They are mostly cases of felony, but care has been taken to collect whatever throws light on the procedure of the Local Courts, the system of frankpledge, the organisation of counties and boroughs for judicial purposes, &c., &c.

Vol. II., for 1888. SELECT PLEAS IN MANORIAL AND OTHER SEIGNORIAL COURTS. Vol. I., Henry III. and Edward I. Edited, from the earliest Rolls extant, by Professor F. W. MAITLAND. Crown 4to. Price to non-members, 28s.

A selection from the oldest manorial records. These embrace the whole legal life and much of the social life of a mediæval village; including land held on villain tenure, services, rights of common, personal actions for debt and trespass, leet and criminal jurisdiction, misdemeanours, the system of local police and frankpledge, trading communities, and the law merchant as administered at a great fair. The selections are from the rolls of the manors of the Abbey of Bec in 13 counties, of the honour of the Abbot of Ramsay in seven counties, his fair of S. Ives, and his manors in Huntingdon, and of other manors in Berks and Wilts.

Vol. III., for 1889. SELECT CIVIL PLEAS. Vol. I., A.D. 1200-1203. Edited, from the Plea Rolls preserved in H.M. Public Record Office, by W. PALEY BAILDON, F.S.A., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-law. Crown 4to. Price to non-members, 28s.

A selection from the earliest records of civil litigation. These consist largely of actions relating to land, either directly, as in the various assises, writs of right and of entry, actions for dower, &c.; or indirectly, as for feudal services, tolls, franchises, rivers, &c. Others do not concern land. The extracts illustrate the gradual evolution of the different forms of action, both real and personal.

Vol. IV., for 1890. THE COURT BARON: PRECEDENTS OF PLEADING IN MANORIAL AND OTHER LOCAL COURTS. Edited, from MSS. of the 14th and 15th Centuries, by Professor F. W. MAITLAND and W. PALEY BAILDON. Crown 4to. Price to non-members, 28s.

This volume contains four treatises on the business of Manorial and other Local Courts, with precedents; and throws light on the procedure and pleading. To these are added some very interesting extracts from the rolls of the Court of the Bishop of Ely at Littleport in the Fens (principally during the reign of Edward II.).

Vol. V., for 1891. THE LEET JURISDICTION IN THE CITY OF NORWICH. Edited, from the Leet Rolls of the 13th and 14th Centuries in the possession of the Corporation, by the Rev. W. HUDSON, M.A. With Map and Facsimile. Crown 4to. Price to non-members, 28s.

This volume deals with mediæval municipal life; the municipal development of a chartered borough with leet jurisdiction, the early working of the frankpledge system; and generally with the judicial, commercial, and social arrangements of one of the largest cities of the kingdom at the close of the 13th century.

Vol. VI., for 1892. SELECT PLEAS OF THE COURT OF ADMIRALTY. Vol. I., A.D. 1390-1404 and A.D. 1527-1545. Edited by REGINALD G. MARSDEN, of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-law. With Facsimile of the ancient Seal of the Court of Admiralty. Crown 4to. Price to non-members, 28s.

The business of the High Court of Admiralty was very considerable during the reigns of Henry VIII., of Elizabeth, and of the Stuarts, and played an important part in the development of commercial law. There is in the Records much curious information upon trade, navigation, and shipping, and the claims of the King of England to a lordship over the surrounding seas.

Vol. VII. for 1893. THE MIRROR OF JUSTICES. Edited, from the unique MS. at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, with a new translation, by W. J. WHITTAKER, M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Professor F. W. MAITLAND. Crown 4to. Price to non-members, 28s.

The old editions of this curious work of the 13th century are corrupt, and in many places unintelligible.

Vol. VIII., for 1894. SELECT PASSAGES FROM BRACTON AND AZO. Edited by Professor F. W. MAITLAND. Crown 4to. Price to non-members, 28s.

This volume contains those portions of Bracton's work in which he follows Azo printed in parallel columns with Azo's text. The use made by Bracton of the works of Bernard of Pavia and the canonist Tancred is also illustrated.

Vol. IX., for 1895. SELECT CASES FROM THE CORONERS' ROLLS, A.D. 1265-1413. Edited, from the Rolls preserved in H.M. Public Record Office, by CHARLES GROSS, Ph.D., Assistant Professor of History, Harvard University. Crown 4to. Price to non-members, 28s.

The functions of the coroner were more important in this period than in modern times. The volume supplies interesting information on the history of the office of coroner, on the early development of the jury, on the jurisdiction of the hundred and county courts, on the collective responsibilities of neighbouring townships, on proof of Englishry, and on the first beginnings of elective representation.

Vol. X., for 1896. SELECT CASES IN CHANCERY, A.D. 1364-1471. Edited, from the Rolls preserved in H.M. Public Record Office, by W. PALEY BAILDON, F.S.A. Crown 4to. Price to non-members, 28s.

These valuable records, of which few have hitherto been printed, throw new light on the connexion of the Chancery with the Council, and the gradual separation of the two; on the early jurisdiction of the Chancery, its forms and procedure, and on the development of the principles of Equity.

Vol. XI., for 1897. SELECT PLEAS OF THE COURT OF ADMIRALTY. Vol. II., A.D. 1547-1602. Edited by REGINALD G. MARSDEN, of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Crown 4to. Price to non-members, 28s.

This volume is in continuation of Vol. VI., and covers the reigns of Edward VI., Mary, and Elizabeth: the period of the greatest importance of the Admiralty Court, and of its most distinguished judges, Dr. David Lewes and Sir Julius Caesar. It illustrates the foreign policy of Elizabeth, the Armada, and other matters and documents of general historical interest. The introduction treats of the Court from the 14th to the 18th century, with references to some State Papers not hitherto printed or calendared.

Vol. XII., for 1898. SELECT CASES IN THE COURT OF REQUESTS, A.D. 1497-1569. Edited, from the Rolls preserved in H.M. Public Record Office, by I. S. LEADAM, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. Crown 4to. Price to non-members, 28s.

The origin and history of this Court have not hitherto been fully investigated. Established by Henry VII. under the Lord Privy Seal, as a Court of Poor Men's Causes, and developed by Cardinal Wolsey, its valuable records illustrate forcibly the struggle between the Council and the Common Law Courts; the development of equity procedure and principle outside the Chancery; the social effect of the dissolution of the monasteries and the raising of rents; the tenure of land; the rights of copyholders; the power of guilds; and many other matters of legal and social interest. The introduction covers the whole history of the Court to its gradual extinction under the Commonwealth and Restoration.

Vol. XIII., for 1899. (See below.)

Vol. XIV., for 1900. BEVERLEY TOWN DOCUMENTS, edited by ARTHUR F. LEACH, Barrister-at-Law, Assistant Charity Commissioner. Crown 4to. Price to non-members, 28s.

These records illustrate the development of Municipal Government in the 14th and 15th centuries; the communal ownership of land; the relations between the town and the trade guilds; and other interesting matters.

The Volumes in course of preparation are

Vol. XIII., for 1899 (in the press). SELECT PLEAS OF THE FOREST, edited by G. J. TURNER.

The Forest Plea Rolls are very interesting and little known. They begin as early as the reign of King John, and consist of perambulations, claims, presentments and other proceedings (such as trials for poaching and trespass on the Forest) before the Justices in Eyre of the Forest.

Vol. XV. for 1901. SELECT PLEAS of the COURT of STAR CHAMBER. Vol. I. By I. S. LEADAM.

The Records* of this Court consist of Bills, Answers, Depositions, and other proceedings. They are of great importance as illustrating both public and private history. None of the Orders or Decrees are known to exist. In the Report of a Committee of the House of Lords made in 1719, it is stated that "the last notice of them that could be got was that they were in a house in St. Bartholomew's Close, London."

Vol. XVI. for 1902. SELECTIONS from the PLEA ROLLS* of the JEWISH EXCHEQUER, A.D. 1244-1272. By J. M. RIGG.

These Rolls illustrate a department of the history of English law which is at present very dark. The Justiciarii Judæorum, who had the status of Barons of the Exchequer, exercised jurisdiction in all affairs relating to the Jewish community, namely, in the accounts of the revenue, in pleas upon contracts made between Jews and Christians, and in causes or questions touching their land or goods, or their tallages, fines, and forfeitures.

Vol. XVII. for 1903. The YEAR BOOKS of EDWARD II. A revised text and translation. Vol. I. By Professor F. W. MAITLAND.

The following are among the Works contemplated for future volumes:

Vol. . SELECT PLEAS in MANORIAL and other SEIGNORIAL COURTS, Vol. II.

Vol. . SELECT CIVIL PLEAS, Vol. II.

Vol. . SELECT PLEAS of the COURT of STAR CHAMBER. Vol. II.

Vol. . The YEAR BOOKS of EDWARD II. Further volumes.

Vol. . CONVEYANCING PRECEDENTS of the THIRTEENTH CENTURY.

There are several interesting sets hitherto unprinted. The mercantile transactions are very curious.

Vol. . The HISTORY of the REGISTER of ORIGINAL WRITS :

* For further information on these Records, see the valuable and learned "Guide to the Principal Classes of Documents preserved in the Public Record Office," by S. R. SCARGILL-BIRD, F.S.A. (London : Eyre & Spottiswoode, 1891.)

The Society has also contemplated the collection of materials for an ANGLO-FRENCH DICTIONARY, for which practical instructions have been kindly drawn up by Professor Skeat. The Council will be glad to receive offers of help in this collection with a view to future publication.

The Council will be grateful for any information upon the contents and custody of any MSS. which may be of sufficient interest to be dealt with by the Society.

All communications may be addressed to the Honorary Secretary,
Mr. B. FOSSETT LOCK, 11 New Square, Lincoln's Inn, London, W.C.

Subscriptions should be paid, and Applications for Forms of Membership or Bankers' Orders and communications as to the issue of the publications should be made to the Honorary Treasurer,

Mr. FRANCIS K. MUNTON, 95a Queen Victoria Street, London, E.C. or, in the United States of America, to the Local Honorary Secretary and Treasurer,
Mr. RICHARD W. HALE, 10 Tremont Street, Boston, Massachusetts.

October 1900.

Selden Society.

FOUNDED 1887.

RULES.

1. The Society shall be called the Selden Society.

2. The object of the Society shall be to encourage the study and advance the knowledge of the history of English Law, especially by the publication of original documents and the reprinting or editing of works of sufficient rarity or importance.

8. Membership of the Society shall be constituted by payment of the annual subscription, or in the case of life members, of the composition. Form of application is given at the foot.

4. The annual subscription shall be £1. 1s., payable in advance on or before the 1st of January in every year. A composition of £21 shall constitute life membership from the date of the composition, and in the case of Libraries, Societies, and corporate bodies, membership for 80 years.

5. The management of the affairs and funds of the Society shall be vested in a President, two Vice-Presidents, and a Council consisting of fifteen members, in addition to the ex officio members. The President, the two Vice-Presidents, the Literary Director, the Secretary, and the Hon. Treasurer shall be ex officio members. Three shall form a quorum.

6. The President, Vice-Presidents, and Members of the Council shall be elected for three years. At every Annual General Meeting such one of the President and Vice-Presidents as has, and such five members of the Council as have served longest without re-election, shall retire. For the purpose of this rule the existing President shall be deemed to have been elected for three years from March 1895, one Vice-President from March 1896, and the other Vice-President from March 1897.

7. The five vacancies in the Council shall be filled up at the Annual General Meeting in and after the year 1896 in the following manner: (a) Any two Members of the Society may nominate for election any other member by a writing signed by them and the nominated member, and sent to the Hon. Secretary on or before the 14th of February. (b) Not less than fourteen days before the Annual General Meeting the Council shall nominate for election five members of the Society. (c) No person shall be eligible for election on the Council unless nominated under this Rule. (d) Any candidate may withdraw. (e) The names of the persons nominated shall be printed in the notice convening the Annual General Meeting. (f) If the persons nominated, and whose nomination shall not have been withdrawn, are not more than five, they shall at the Annual General Meeting be declared to have been elected. (g) If the persons nominated, and whose nomination shall not have been withdrawn, shall be more than five, an election shall take place by ballot as follows : every member of the Society present at the Meeting shall be entitled to vote by writing the names of not more than five of the candidates on a piece of paper and delivering it to the Hon. Secretary or his Deputy, at such meeting, and the five candidates who shall have a majority of votes shall be declared elected. In case of equality the Chairman of the Meeting shall have a second or casting vote. The vacancy in the office of President or Vice-President shall be filled in the same manner (mutatis mutandis).

8. The Council may fill casual vacancies in the Council or in the offices of President and Vice-President. Persons so appointed shall hold office so long as those in whose place they shall be appointed would have held office. The Council shall also have power to appoint Honorary Members of the Society.

9. The Council shall meet at least twice a year, and not less than seven days' notice of any meeting shall be sent by post to every member of the Council.

10. There shall be a Literary Director to be appointed and removable by the Council. The Council may make any arrangement for remunerating the Literary Director which they may think reasonable.

11. It shall be the duty of the Literary Director (but always subject to the control of the Council) to supervise the editing of the publications of the Society, to suggest suitable editors, and generally to advise the Council with respect to carrying the objects of the Society into effect.

12. Each member shall be entitled to one copy of every work published by the Society as for any year of his membership. No person other than an Honorary Member shall receive any such work until his subscription for the year as for which the same shall be published shall have been paid.

13. The Council shall appoint an Hon. Secretary and also an Hon. Treasurer and such other Officers as they from time to time think fit, and shall from time to time define their respective duties.

14. The funds of the Society, including the vouchers or securities for any investments, shall be kept at a Bank, to be selected by the Council, to an account in the name of the Society. Such funds or investments shall only be dealt with by a cheque or other authority signed by the Treasurer and countersigned by one of the Vice-Presidents or such other person as the Council may from time to time appoint.

15. The accounts of the receipts and expenditure of the Society up to the 31st of December in each year shall be audited once a year by two Auditors, to be appointed by the Society, and the report of the Auditors, with an abstract of the accounts, shall be circulated together with the notice convening the Annual Meeting.

16. An Annual General Meeting of the Society shall be held in March 1896, and thereafter in the month of March in each year. The Council may upon their own resolution and shall on the request in writing of not less than ten members call a Special General Meeting. Seven days' notice at least, specifying the object of the meeting and the time and place at which it is to be held, shall be posted to every member resident in the United Kingdom at his last known address. No member shall vote at any General Meeting whose subscription is in arrear.

17. The Hon. Secretary shall keep a Minute Book wherein shall be entered a record of the transactions, as well at Meetings of the Council as at General Meetings of the Society.

18. These rules may upon proper notice be repealed, added to, or modified from time to time at any meeting of the Society. But such repeal, addition, or modification, if not unanimously agreed to, shall require the vote of not less than two-thirds of the members present and voting at such meeting.

March 1897.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR MEMBERSHIP.

To MR. FRANCIS K. MUNTON, 95A Queen Victoria Street, London, E.C., Honorary Treasurer of the Selden Society.

I desire to become a member of the Society, and herewith send my cheque for One Guinea, the annual subscription [or £21 the life contribution] dating from the commencement of the present year. [I also desire to subscribe for the preceding years , and I add one guinea for each to my cheque.]
